—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SAN SIMEON, Cal., Aug. 10.

VICTOR L. BERGER, late editor of the Milwaukee Leader, will be buried today. His death is a loss to his city, his state and to Congress, which heard unpleasant truths from him, and listened, because it respected his sincerity.

VICTOR BERGER was able, honest, a good American. His fellow citizens of Milwaukee, the ablest, including those that disagreed with his political theories, will indorse that statement.

A man of great ability, he could easily have accumulated wealth. He preferred to devote his life to the welfare of other men.

FLYING around the world should be popular, in prohibition America, when flying safely becomes firmly established.

Passengers, gathering for their first dinner, found waiting in the clouds, over the ocean, caviar, green turtle soup, squab, strawberries and cream.

LAZARUS, traveling upward in Abraham's bosom, enjoying the sight of Dives, burning in hell, had no such luncheon as that.

"And," says Wiegand, "there was exquisite wine from the Graf's 'cellar.'"

THE Wilson Observatory has photographs of recent happenings on our sun that interest you.

OUR real life, future and safety are there, more than 90,000,000 miles away.

IF THE sun's temperature dropped below thirty million degrees, centigrade, life on this earth would be impossible. You would freeze.

ONE photograph shows a burst of gaseous flame, hundreds of thousands of miles in length. In that flame, our earth would look smaller than a baseball in a big furnace.

THE observatory is studying with particular care one sun spot 33,000 miles wide. That is only a bubble on the sun's surface, equivalent in size to a small freckle on a girl's nose.

You may safely examine that spot through a piece of colored glass or an over-exposed photographic negative.

SCIENCE will be much obliged if you will tell what supplies the sun's terrific energy.

It is not "combustion," no mere "burning up of matter" as men once thought. The sun, billions of years old and 1,000,000 times bigger than our earth, would have been burned up long ago.

"THE stripping of the atoms," which means tearing the electrons away from their nuclei, creates the energy, according to recent scientific teaching.

STRIPPED of their electrons, the atomic nuclei are packed close together, possessing a scientific gravity beyond comprehension. Solemnly science tells you that there exists in space matter so densely packed that one cubic inch of it would weigh a ton.

The Frenchman of Voltaire's Day, asked to prove his statement that the earth goes around the sun, admitted that he could not prove it, and added: "Mais je vous en donne ma parole d'honneur"—"But I give you my word of honor."

That "proof" must suffice, in many modern instances.

A YOUNG American, who got millions from his father, has spent his first week in a British prison, and does not like it.

He was convicted of killing a man with his automobile, while intoxicated. He told the court he had had five or six drinks, but was sober. British justice gave alcohol the benefit of the doubt.

The young millionaire complains that prison food is not good, and objects to a rule that gets him out of bed at 6 a. m. Possibly if his father had made such a rule, years ago, the young man might not have gone to jail.

YOUNG gentlemen of the same type, going abroad, should remember that British justice pays little attention to millions, and none at all when an American is concerned

The young American's lawyer revealed an interesting "hands across the sea" truth, when he urged the jury not to convict the young man "because he was an American."

BROKERS' loans passed six billions and the Federal Reserve raised its discount rate to 6 per cent.

If brokers' loans should pass eight billions, would the Federal Reserve make the rate 8 per cent?

It probably would, except that some state laws against usury could interfere. And there must be some one in the Federal Reserve that would object to putting that institution on an absolutely pawnshop basis.

KLINE BACKING TOWNSEND FOR CONTROLLER

Evans' Declaration That He Will Support Malone in Mayoralty, Motivates Act

A surprise candidate for the office of city controller, Edward Townsend, superintendent of the bureau of city property and son of the late Henry Townsend, long a political power, tossed his hat into the ring today.

Townsend's candidacy in opposition to City Controller Henry O. Evans, who also is seeking the nomination, is taken as a reply to Evans' reported recent pledge at a Hill meeting to support Councilman James F. Malone for mayor against Mayor Charles H. Kline.

KLINE BACKS TOWNSEND

The administration forces will line up behind Townsend, according to reports at City Hall.

While no formal announcement of his candidacy was forthcoming, petitions asking Townsend's name be placed on the ballots for the Republican nomination at the primaries, September 17, were circulated by his friends among employees at the City-County building.

Townsend, 31, fell heir to the city property bureau post upon death of his father, January 15, 1927. He also has followed his father's footsteps as Republican chairman of the Twentieth ward.

EVANS APPOINTED

Evans was named controller by council last January to fill the unexpired term of the late John H. Henderson.

Other reported prospective candidates for the controllership are Daniel Winters, former president of council and Clifford B. Connelley, librarian of the Allegheny Carnegie Library.

BANDITS' LOOT DISCOVERED

Joseph Maloney and Andrew L. Hufnagle, detained in connection with the holdup of Henry Koch and George Nusskern, employes of the Tech Food Products Company, at Butler and Thirty-fourth streets, July 28, yesterday led city detectives to where they had buried the money bag containing $10,500 in checks and money taken in the holdup.

It was secreted in a clump of bushes near the Bureau of Mines road, in the vicinity of Curry.

CHECKS DESTROYED

Checks which were in the bag were torn and thrown in the creek, the suspects told the investigators. Search was made of the narrow stream by Detective Lieut. Edward O'Rourke and Detectives James Swearingan and Joseph Leith, but no trace of a check was found.

John B. Sloan is the third suspect held by the detectives.

Henry Zadach, 22, of 1018 Marena street, was arrested late yesterday at Twenty-ninth and Smallman streets, as a suspicious person. He is suspected, the detectives said, of

DUQUESNE CLUB SECRETARY FALLS DEAD

William J. Jones, 63, Fatally Stricken in Turkish Bath; Heart Ailment Is Blamed

William J. Jones, 63, secretary of the exclusive Duquesne Club, fell dead in the club's turkish bath today.

Jones collapsed and expired a few minutes later. Dr. L. E. Davis told morgue authorities that a chronic heart affliction was the cause.

Jones had been secretary and treasurer of the club, which had its quarters in Sixth avenue, near Wood street, for five years.

He was a brother of J. H. Jones, cashier of the Farmers Deposit National Bank. He leaves his widow and three children.

HEAR COAL MAN ON DONOHOE

By SHELDON REED
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTODN, Pa., Aug. 10.—With the Donohoe slaying admittedly near a solution, interest centered in the conference between Maj. Lynn G. Adams, of the state police, and William Reilly, former coal operator, awaiting sentence on a liquor conspiracy charge.

Reilly is said to have been largely responsible for Donohoe's removal as a deputy constable, although the petition against him was filed by Attorney George Patterson.

Reilly was closeted with Major Adams for 20 minutes, but neither the investigator nor his visitor would discuss what transpired.

FEW LINKS MISSING

Major Adams said that only a few links are missing to complete the chain of evidence which has been built around the supposed

SNOOK LETTERS BEFORE JURY

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 10.—The "My Dear Sweetikissikums" letters Dr. James Howard Snook penned to Theora Hix, pretty young co-ed he hammered to death, will be available to the jury for their consideration when they retire to deliberate the fate of the 49-year-old former college professor.

So "mushy" and erratic are these love missives that the defense believes they will support their contention that Snook is "insane."

NOTES ALL ENDEARING

"My Dearie" was the way Snook, or "Mabel" as he signed himself, usually addressed Theora when he wrote to her when she was in Cleveland in 1927, but sometimes he varied the salutation with "My dear sweetikissikums."

The letters closed with such phrases as "here's an earthquake tremor squeeze" or "here's a great big 'bear hug' and squeeze and a wee little kiss."

Dr. Snook can see the little packet of love letters lying there on a table, amid other exhibits more grewsome—such as the blood-stained hammer and the slain girl's garments—as he sits amid his law-

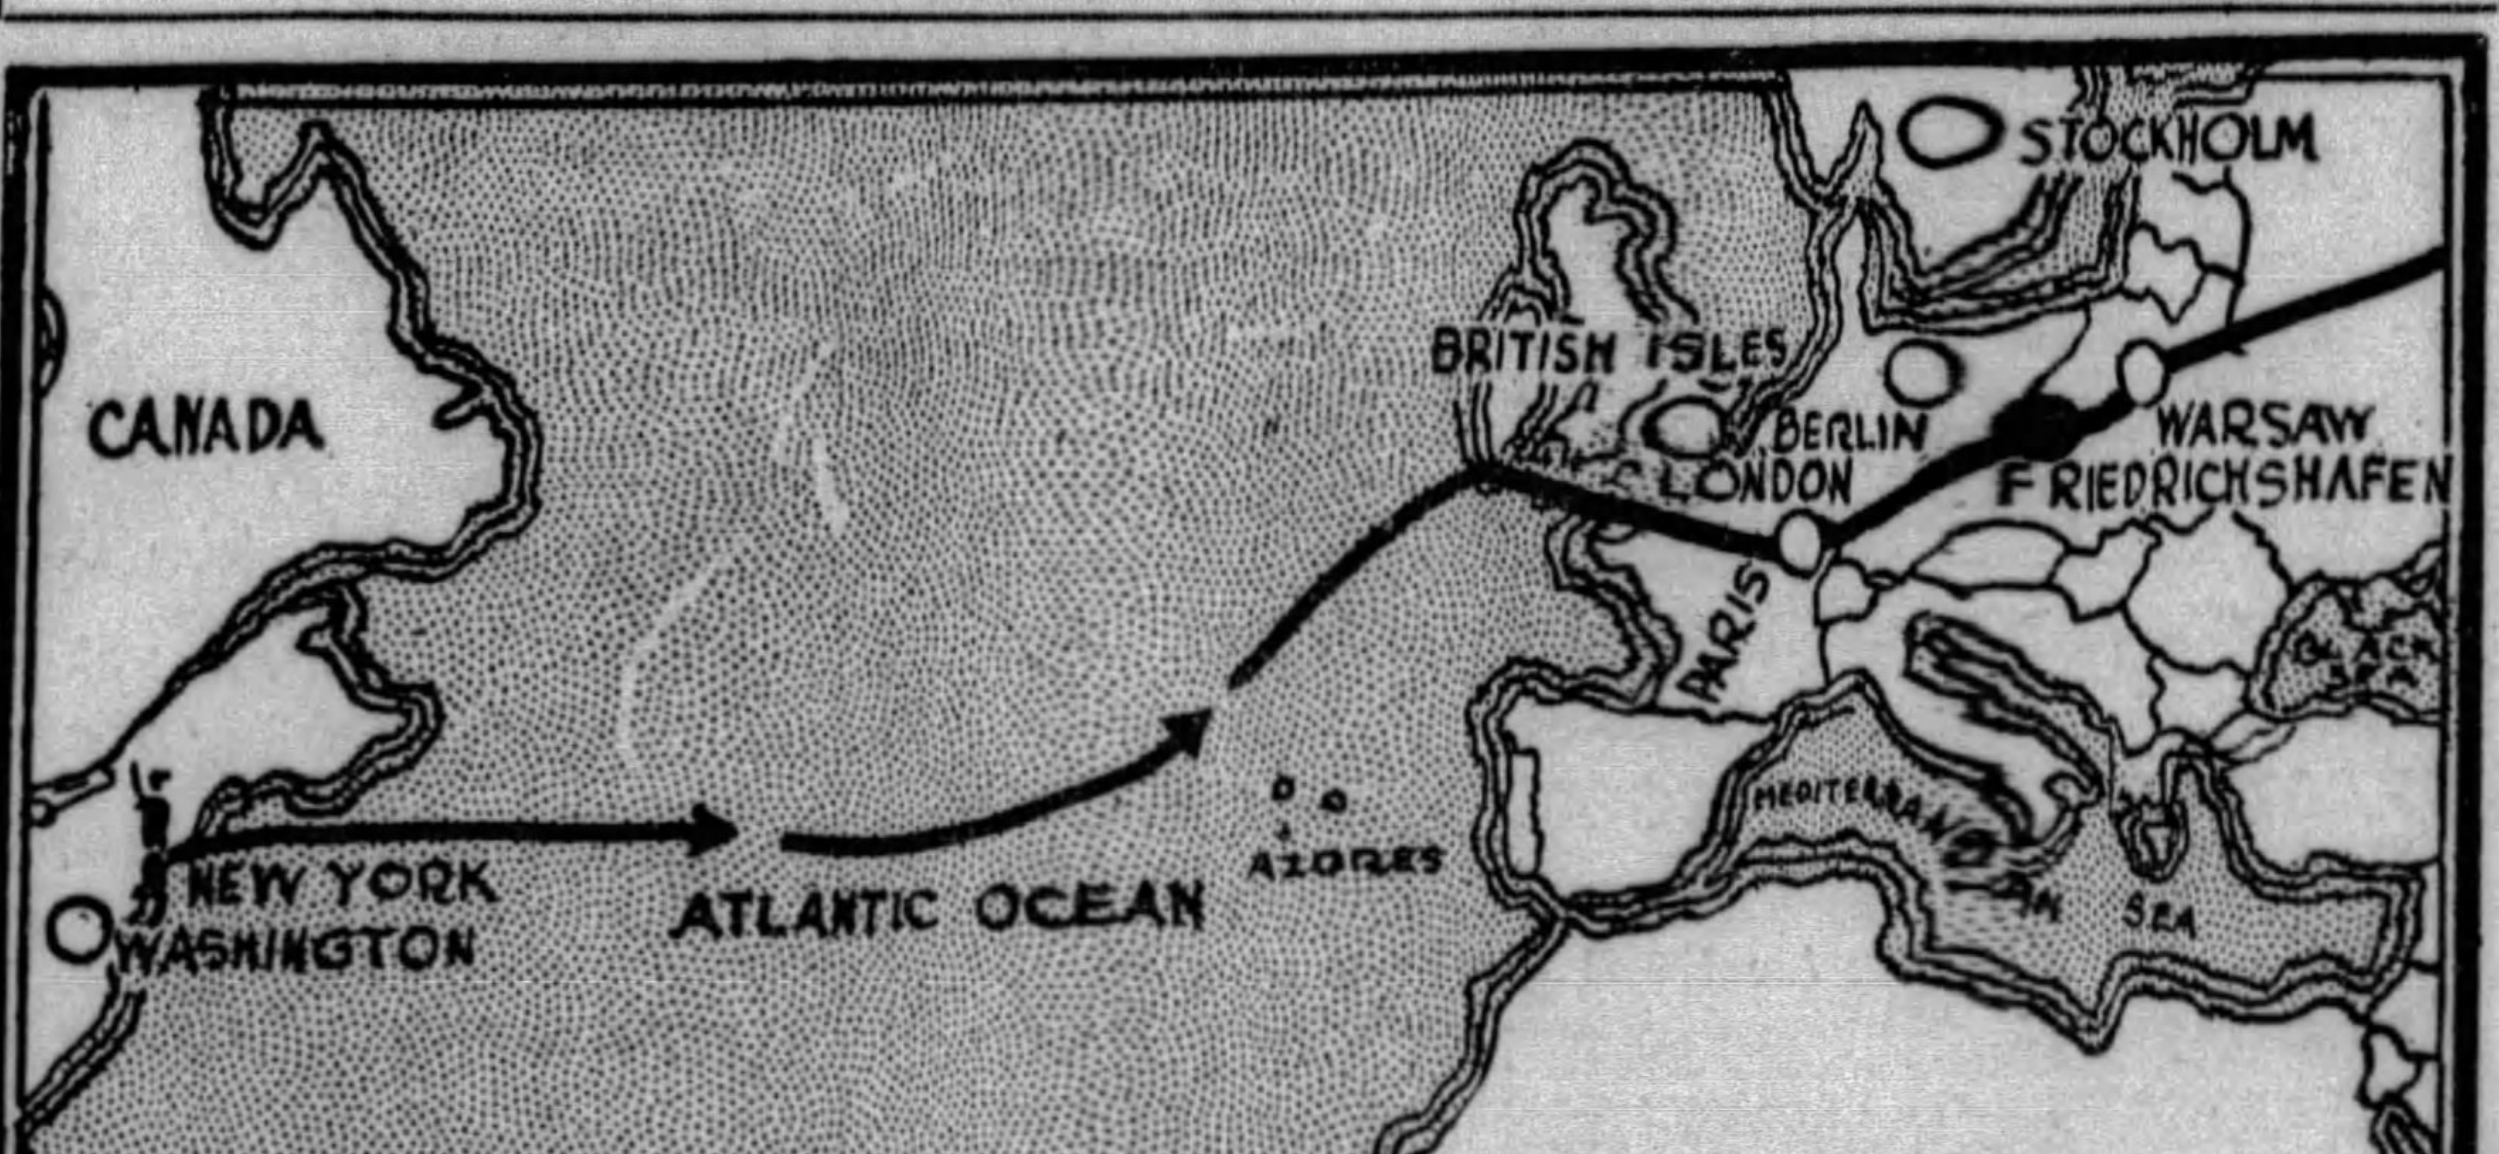
ZEP'S ROUTE OVER ATLANTIC OCEAN



GRAF'S COURSE TO HOME BASE ON FIRST LEG OF WORLD CRUISE

ECKENER, CHEERED, SETS TAKE-OFF FOR TOKIO IN FOUR DAYS

By WALTER DIETZEL,
International News Service.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Aug. 10.—Germany's aerial grayhound, the Graf Zeppelin, landed here at 1 o'clock this afternoon, 8 a. m. Pittsburgh daylight saving time, completing safely the first leg of the 21,700-mile Hearst-Zeppelin Round-the-World voyage.

Speeding over the Atlantic with favorable winds behind her, the Graf traveled the 4,400 miles from Lakehurst, N. J., in 55 hours and 20 minutes. Her average speed was appproximately 80 miles an hour although her speed at one time rose to 105 land miles an hour.

When the ship sailed into view through the mist at 12:40 o'clock, she was escorted by a Dornier seaplane, which had risen from Lake Constance earlier in the morning to greet her. The Dornier circled the Graf, gracefully dipping her wings in salutation and homage.

After her first appearance the Graf disappeared in the clouds but soon returned to view.

Cheering Crowd Greets Liner at Port

The cheering crowd about the landing field, held back by a force of soldiers and police, could see the passengers waving from the windows of the great forward cabin.

As the Zeppelin soared slowly towards her hangar through a slight drizzle of rain, Dr. Hugo Eckener, the commander, pointed her nose down sharply. The landing ropes were dropped just before 1 o'clock and the trained land crew grasped them and pulled with a will. It was 1 o'clock, in strict accordance with Dr. Eckener's schedule, when the Graf touched her home ground.

"Our world trip to Tokio will be resumed in about four days, but not before Wednesday," Dr. Eckener told International News Service. "The 'skin' of the ship is loosened somewhat. It must be tightened, but that is a task that can soon be finished."

The crowd went wild with enthusiasm as the ship came to a dead halt before her hangar.

"I foresee the time when we will be making week-end trips across the Atlantic just to have Sunday dinner in Berlin or Paris," said Sir Hubert Wilkins, famous Arctic and Antarctic explorer, who was a passenger.

Eckener Shows Skill in Perfect Landing

The landing of the dirigible was a remarkable maneuver. Dr. Eckener again demonstrated that he is the world's foremost air sailor. He reversed the ship's motors and hovered stationary over the field. Then he made a "straight down" landing. The crew, grasping the landing ropes, slowly turned the ship and fastened it to the carriages outside the hangar. Then as the crowd cheered and yelled "Hoch Eckener!" the Graf was pushed into her hangar just at 1:20 o'clock, 20 minutes after she had touched ground.

"This trip was an amazing performance rivaling Col. Lindbergh's record flight from New York to Paris," declared Lady Drummond Hay, the only woman passenger, after she had left the cabin. "There was no trouble at all on any part of the flight. We enjoyed every minute of it immensely."

This same sentiment was echoed by another passenger, Nelson Morris, of Chicago.

"It was certainly a flight of historic signifiance," Morris told International News Service. "It has given the best proof that the Zeppelin is the best means of trans-Atlantic transportation."

Among the crowd were many members of the families of the ship's officers. These included Mrs. Eckener, wife of the commander, and Mrs. Lehmann, wife of the pilot.

Feat Marks Eckener's 61st Birthday

"My husband has his sixty-first birthday today and this trip is the most precious birthday gift for him," said Mrs. Eckener. "We are certainly going to have a happy birthday party this evening."

"It is simply thrilling," exclaimed Mrs. Lehmann.

"It was a wonderful achievement," declared the Chilean consul, who was among the foreign officials present.

All Friedrichshafen is beflagged. The town is full of visitors. Heavy rain fell early in the morning and there was fog, but the rain later lessened to a drizzle.

Wireless messages were announced, keeping the crowd apprised of the progress of the ship.

SLURS AT POLICE LIEUTENANT'S FUNERAL BRING ARREST

MAN JAILED, MOURNERS DELAYED

Escort at Pugh Burial Takes Alleged Detractor to Cell; War Veterans Carry Body

C. A. Bodie, of 1528 Montier street, Wilkinsburg, today was under arrest because of his conduct during the funeral of Police Lieut. Belmont Pugh, of Wilkinsburg, yesterday.

In front of the Griffin, Jobe & Knee funeral parlors, Bodie made slurring remarks against the dead man, police said, while war veterans were carrying the body from the parlors. Police reported arresting him when he rushed up to them at the funeral and repeated his remarks. The funeral was delayed until the funeral escort of police guided Bodie, a radio engineer, to the lockup. He was held on a charge of disorderly conduct.

DISARMED BODIE

Police say that last April Lieut. Pugh was forced to break into Bodie's home and disarm the man. Bodie, police say, had fired a rifle from his home into a crowd of Pittsburgh Railways Company employes working about a compressor. One man was shot and another burned when the gasoline tank, which had been punctured, exploded. Charges growing out of the shooting are still pending, police say.

The Rev. Thomas D. Edgar, of the Second United Presbyterian Church, conducted service for Pugh in the funeral parlors, and burial was in Homewood Cemetery.

PUGH'S JOB FILLED

Burgess Jesse R. Langley, of Wilkinsburg, announced the appointment today of Patrolman James Harris as lieutenant of police to take the place of Lieut. Pugh. Pugh was found dead from a bullet wound several days ago in a room where the body of Miss Louise Stine also lay.

Langley said he had hastened to fill Pugh's place because Wilkinsburg's chief of police, Wallace Bishop, is in Canada on an automobile trip, and the force has been without a commanding officer.

Harris will be acting chief until Bishop returns. His home is at 1350 Penn avenue, Wilkinsburg, and he has been on the force for six years, for the last two as a motorcycle officer.

GRAF REACHES HOME, LOWERS SPEED MARK

Dr. Eckener was kept busy answering birthday congratulations.

"I am both proud and happy," said the commodore to his friends.

Crowd Sees Landing

"The passengers on the flight over the Atlantic and round the globe congratulate their tried commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, a storm-tested, air-sea captain," she said. "We heartily wish him to have always happy voyages and further success so that the name Eckener will become the symbol of wise judgment, daring and enterprise in rapprochement and understanding between nations."

Two lorry loads of police reinforced by naval cadets assisted in keeping order. The enthusiasm of the crowd was such that they had their hands full every minute.

The whole population of Friedrichshafen was at the field. Those who had remained in their homes during the morning made a dash for the field when the Graf was first sighted at 12:40 o'clock.

Crowds on Roofs

All the roofs of buildings and railway cars were crowded. On no previous return of the Graf from a long voyage abroad had there been so much excitement and enthusiasm.

A southeast wind had sprung up late in the morning, rippling the German flags that flew overhead.

Officials of the Zeppelin works had taken every precaution for a safe landing. A special wooden structure had been erected near the hangar to prevent the rear gondola from bumping on the ground and being damaged, as happened on a trial flight recently.

William B. Leeds, of New York, a passenger, seemed to be in a tremendous hurry. He had radioed the Kurgarten Hotel to hold an automobile in readiness for him for an immediate trip to Frankfort as soon as he could get through the customs examination. He said it was a great experience.

Over Sea in 42 Hours

The official log of the Graf showed that the elapsed time on the flight from the Statue of Liberty, in New York harbor, to Lizard Light, off the southwestern coast of England, was 42 hours and 42 minutes. From New York to Eiffel Tower in Paris the elapsed time was 47 hours and 44 minutes.

Ship's officers said that the passengers were "terribly excited" when they learned that the Graf was going to fly over Paris, and were out of their beds at 4 o'clock.

CHARRED AUTO REVEALS BODY

NEWARK, N. J Aug. 10.—(INS.)—New Jersey police officials were today faced with the solving of what they declare is another "torch murder," following the discovery late last night of a charred body, so thoroughly burned that police were unable to determine whether it was that of a man or a woman, in the rear seat of an expensive sedan in the Newark city dumping ground.

The car, according to an employe of the dump, was driven to the dumping ground by two men, who ran from it and sped away in an awaiting car. A few seconds later the machine burst into flames, followed by several explosions.

When firemen arrived, the sedan was a mass of twisted metal. Wedged between what remained of the seats was the charred body, and with it five cans which were presumed to have contained gasoline.

The automobile bore no license plates, and the engine number had been mutilated so that identification of the car will be difficult.

This was the third murder case recently in Jersey in which the victims were set afire.

conspirators in the Donohoe slaying.

Reilly was owner of a garage in which a still was found. After his conviction, both he and Mrs. Reilly conferred with Judge S. John Morrow, with the result that almost immediately the court acted favorably on the Patterson petition for Donohoe's removal.

"Big Ed" Wonsetter, brought back as a fugitive from justice, who gave intimate details of the Fayette County liquor situation, is said to have told Judge Morrow that the still on the Reilly premises was one which had paid liberal tribute to the slain ex-constable.

"SENSATION" EXPLODED

Uniontown, which had two spine-chilling sensations in four days through the slaying of Donohoe and the suicide of District Attorney Nicholas W. Rosenberg, almost had its third yesterday.

A youth was found rifling a filing cabinet in the court reporter's room, scattering papers about. It was reported that an attempt had been made to steal the records in the Donohoe case. Police learned, however, that the youth was Earl Rathbourne, 20, of Connellsville, who had escaped from relatives while he was being taken to a hospital for mental treatment.

Tony Barber, of 1219 Mulberry way, in Central Police Court today blamed on liquor his penchant for climbing, which led him to the roof of the Humane Society Building, Bigelow boulevard and Washington street, late yesterday. He was captured on the roof by Evard Simons, a humane agent, police testified. Barber was fined $50 with the alternative of 30 days in the workhouse.

complicity in the Rudd Manufacturing Company payroll holdup. According to Maloney, officers stated, Zadach "tipped off" Sloan as to when the men carrying the pay would arrive at the Rudd office. The loot was $6,000 which was carried by John Richardson and Norman Doyle.

TWO OTHER ROBBERIES

The other two robberies, in which two of the three suspects have confessed, police say, were Unger's jewelry store, at 976 Liberty avenue, held up December 18, when $60,000 in jewelry was taken, and the holdup in the Ward Baking Company plant at Liberty avenue and Thirty-first street, April 1, when $11,000 in checks and $5,00 in canh was taken from Edwino Legoullon.

The four holdups which occurred within 18 months, have been cleared up, detectives said, with the arrest of the suspects.

Maloney, who lives in Crafton, and Hufnagle, of McKees Rocks, were arrested Tuesday in Washington, after they had been implicated in Sloan's confession previously. Maloney was the first to break under police grilling. Sloan was the leader of the mob, detectives said.

ON STAND 17 HOURS

He has completed his testimony in his own behalf, which kept him on the witness stand for 17 hours. During that time he proved himself to be the strange, unfathonable character he has been since the day of his arrest—an interesting study in psychology.

Snook quibbled with Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., over the word "murder." Under cross-examination he was asked by the young prosecuting attorney:

"Don't you admit the murder?"

"No, sir, I don't," retorted Snook, truculently.

He finally admitted "killing" the girl, but he wouldn't say the word "murder." He put it this way:

"I admit I killed the girl because she threatened to kill my wife and baby and because she threatened me."

SHOWS HOW HE KILLED

That seemed to sum up the whole issue as far as Snook himself was concerned. Just prior to this admission he had stood before the jury, blood-stained hammer in his hand, and at the request of the prosecutor showed how he hit Miss Hix the "one real hard blow" that felled and silenced her.

The defense today continued introducing evidence intended to show that Miss Hix's death may have been caused by one of the hammer blows instead of the clean and apparently calculated cut that severed her jugular vein. The indictment against Snook accuses him of killing her with a knife and makes no mention of the hammer blows. This explains the bickering over the issue of just what wound caused the co-ed's death.

$39.34 Your Share Of Money in Circulation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP)—If the money Uncle Sam had in circulation at the end of last month was divided equally among the population of the United States each person would have $39.34.

This was revealed in the monthly circulation statement of the Treasury which showed $4,717,242,524 was in circulation on July 31, and the population of the United States was estimated at 119,906,000.

The per capita division for June 30, was given at $39.62 with $39.67 for July 31, 1928.

HOOVER, 55, AT REST CAMP

MADISON, Va., Aug. 10.—(AP).—President Hoover dedicated his fifty-fifth birthday to rest and recreation with a party of relatives, friends and co-workers at his camp at the headwaters of the Rapidan River in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Mrs. Hoover and their son, Allan, were already at the camp when the President's party arrived, having spent the week there.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were included in the list of unofficial guests,

DRIVER ROBBED OF CASH, CAB

Police today were looking for two armed men who last night held up Michael Fox, taxicab driver, in Middletown road, near Mutual street, robbed him of $6 and escaped in the cab after warning the driver not to follow them.

Fox told West End police half an hour later that the men engaged him at Fifth avenue and Smithfield street. After forcing him to stop they robbed him and pushed him from the machine, he said.

Lucky Bucks—New Money for Old

BULLETIN.

A big special lucky buck announcement will be made in Monday's paper.

By LUCKY BUCK

Well, folks, it's a great old world, and I guess it takes all kinds of people to make it great, doesn't it? Anyhow, I played for fish yesterday, all right.

I thought all you folks in the outlying sections and towns would like to have a better chance than ever of obtaining a Lucky Buck. So I tours down to Wheeling, and then over to Steubenville. By the time I got to Steubenville, I was in a hurry to get back, so I asked a state trooper the best way. He tells me to cut back down the Ohio and up through Follansbee, that bein' the only stem in good shape.

But on the toll bridge, a nice-enough looking railroad man asks for a lift to Burgettstown. Well, I tells him the way I'm planning on going, but he says the William Penn is the only presentable route, and that's good new brick paving all the way to Pittsburgh, and you can keep your foot on the floor the entire distance. Well, I could to Burgettstown, but from there on—whoof! That man sure did take me in. So don't none of you go asking Mr. Lucky Buck for no more rides, 'cause you won't get 'em.

In Washington, Pa., there's a Succulent Suskin in the Griffin Beauty Shop, where a nice-enough gal manicures my nails for six bits. My nails didn't know what to think of that, I bein' ordinarily a he-man, but they stood up well under the operation and are getting along nicely, thank you. The Griffin Beauty Shop is spelled with one "p" and no "e," and lives at 60 North Main street.

Then, pushing ever onward, I left a Fortunate Simoleon at the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria, in Wheeling, where I filled my gullet with fancies for another six bits. Feeling that nothing's too good for the Wheelingites, the Central News dealers have yet another Benevolent Bean.

And in Steubenville, that city of industry, I left another buck in Burgoyne's Drug store, 110 Third avenue. Bless 'em, they sell as good milk shakes and cigarets as you can get anywhere. And, again, Carnegie roped one in at the filling station at 531 Main street.

If you watch your pennies—or bucks—folks, you're almost sure to find one of these bucks pretty soon. And then—oh, boy, what a party! Like Patrolman Frank Knefelkamt, 3910 Brownsville road, Brentwood. He saw me loafing around his town and suspected things; sure enough, Lucky Buck N T82772363D dropped into the old sock and Knefelkamt frames his face in smiles and collects while I'm out. It's an old Spanish custom, folks, and lucky I wasn't in.

George Milan, too, is no fool. Living at 1705 Cedar avenue, Turtle Creek, he manages to be up and doing things in spite of the fact. That's how he managed to find Lucky Buck No. V59338438D which I had left at the garage of Strubler and Riley in that village just exactly ten days ago. Is Milan the only bird in all Turtle Creek fast enough to catch on to a bill when I leave it under their noses, almost?

Of course, Mrs. George M. Wood, too, must be given credit for being quick witted. I walked into her hubby's phonograph store the other day, at 1410 Wylie avenue, and bought a good piece of jazz music. But Benevolent Bean No. B51384159E didn't get from under her wing once until she'd collected a chain of 20 ones for it.

And Fred Baldus, last but not least, collected Lucky Buck No. Z77737700D from his brother Christ Baldus, a dry goods merchant, at 800 Pittsburgh street, Springdale. Fred lives at 220 Colfax Lane, so you can see where the buck I left in the Pittsburgh street drug store went to.

I tell you, folks, I'm at the point where I can't think where to go next. You folks in the outlying districts can't kick 'cause I haven't been out your way, and you city folks have all had a throw at this here new game. I can't understand why you don't get more of 'em—but I'd be broke if you did, I guess. You bring 'em in plenty fast, goodness knows, but I put 'em out nearly as fast. Here are the new ones put out yesterday:

U. S. TO EUROPE IN TWO DAYS THRILLS ZEP ARGONAUTS

NEW RECORD OVERJOYS ECKENER

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,

World-Renowned Newspaper Correspondent, Who Crossed the Atlantic Aboard the Graf Zeppelin on Its First Trans-Atlantic Cruise, and Who Is Writing the Story of the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World Flight.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, OVER LAND'S END, England, Aug. 10.—Land. It is Land's End. It is England. We have crossed the Atlantic. It is 1 o'clock in the morning, 44 hours after we left Lakehurst. Three hours more and we will give London its thrill.

America to Europe in two days. The Statue of Liberty to the Lizard in 42 hours and 42 minutes.

We soared over New York at 12:42 Eastern Standard Time. We streaked by the Lizard at 11:30 last night.

MISSION OF PEACE

That is a history-making achievement by the Graf Zeppelin in the first leg of the Hearst-Zeppelin-Round-the-World Flight.

The Graf has earned its right to the golden pennant of the air.

The Scilly Islands first, soon after midnight. Then on like a flash to the shores of Cornwall. A peaceful Zeppelin—over England—the first one since the war.

Shortly before midnight Dr. Eckener began seriously to consider passing over the capital of the British Empire. He asked Lady Drummond Hay to come to the bridge of the Graf and enjoy the thrill of a 48-hour-or-less record from America to London—her own city.

WIND HELPS PACE

The weather is favorable, as it has been most of the way, the wind has helped speed our pace. All day long we have been trembling with the excitement of this new thrill.

Roaring through the blackest night, with fog and clouds like fantastic ghosts swirling by our cabin windows glaringly white in the reflected light, and with occasional rains splattering us, 8 o'clock this morning found the Graf Zeppelin at 36 west longitude and 44 north latitude. We were streaking along at that hour like a silver comet at 91 nautical miles or nearly 105 land miles per hour.

Through holes in the misty veil surrounding us the whitecapped Atlantic was rolling turbulently 1,600 feet below.

I had left the bridge at 2 o'clock this morning, knowing that Hubert Wilkins soon would take up the duties of the news watch. When I woke up again I sensed immediately a thrill in the air, and I ran out on the bridge in my pajamas.

ECKENER TAKES POST

There I found suppressed excitement. Capt. Lehmann was in command, but Commander Eckener took his favorite place as he declared:

"We are making 172 kilometers—that is around 105 land miles per hour."

That was a hearty greeting, and the old commander was smiling broadly. I soon realized what had happened. The commodore had successfully hitched a 40-mile wind to the Graf Zeppelin and was adding the immense push of that stiff breeze to the force of the propellers. He said:

"We left the Statue of Liberty at 12:45 yesterday morning. If this keeps up, we may reach Europe before midnight tonight."

FACES SHOW PRIDE

Capt. Lehmann, with Navigators Wittman and Pruss, was bending over his charts with dividers and parallel rulers. Their happy countenance reflected their pride and pleasure in the performance of our silver ship.

From 8 o'clock in the morning until nearly 3 this afternoon we raced through the sky.

North Side Child Injured in Fall

Zeppelin Makes New Record on Trip East

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Aug. 10.—(INS.)—The Graf Zeppelin established a new speed record for a west-to-east crossing of the Atlantic by lighter-than-air craft when she landed home today 55 hours and 20 minutes after leaving Lakehurst, N. J. The distance was 4,400 miles.

She lowered her time of 68 hours and 46 minutes on her first flight from Lakehurst by 13 hours and 26 minutes, averaging slightly more than 80 miles per hour.

The British dirigible R-34 took 64 hours and 13 minutes when she flew from Mineola, L. I., to Clifden, Ireland, in 1919.

The Graf cut the recent west-to-east record crossing of the North German liner Bremen almost exactly in half.

The Bremen took four days, 14 hours and 30 minutes (110 hours and 30 minutes) from New York to Plymouth, England. The Graf arrived at Friedrichshafen 55 hours and 10 minutes sooner.

She was within 43 miles of Plymouth at 8:15 E. D. T. last night, when only 43 hours and 35 minutes out from Lakehurst. Figuring from New York to Plymouth, she therefore cut the Bremen's time by 76 hours and 15 minutes..

MOTHER-TO-BE STILL HELD

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Thelma Holland, 22-year-old mother-to-be, must remain under bail for 60 days more, pending further investigation into charges that she helped operate a still. This was ordered yesterday by Superior Judge Marshall McComb upon the request of Deputy District Attorney Daniel Beecher.

Belief that District Attorney Buron Fitts would have the charges against the young woman dismissed were dissipated at the hearing. Beecher announced that after conferring with his chief it had been decided to investigate details of four times she was arrested for bootlegging, it was said, although all these charges were dropped. It was also reported that she had been charged with vagrancy and had not been legally divorced from a former husband at the time she married Charles Holland.

Despite her condition, and statements by her husband that she had nothing to do with the operation of the still, Judge Emmet Wilson sentenced her to San Quentin. The husband was sent to Folsom.

A storm of public protest over the woman's sentence resulted in a reopening of the case.

ARREST OF REDS UNLIKELY

The arrest of speakers for utterances made at a North Side street corner meeting of the Communist Party and the Young Communists' League, now seems remote, judging from the attitude of city officials.

Police assigned to the meeting made notes of the speeches delivered Wednesday at East Ohio street and Union avenue, and a transcript was submitted to Safety Director James M. Clark.

In the absence from the city of City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt, the director reviewed the speeches yesterday with Charles P. Lang, special assistant city solicitor.

No decision was announced, but observers concluded that seditious matter was absent from the speeches, as otherwise the city officials immediately would have referred the case to Federal authorities.

Clark may discipline the speakers for holding a meeting without a permit from the Safety Department as required by city ordinances. Discussing "Red" meetings generally, Clark declared yesterday:

"It is not the intention of the Police Department or myself to suppress such meetings if proper application is filed and a permit issued. However, the police Department has the right by city ordinance to designate the time and place where such meetings should be held."

Coach Service Opens To Oakmont Sunday

Announcement was made at the offices of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company late yesterday that its service to Oakmont would begin tomorrow morning. The coaches will leave every hour on the hour, beginning at 7 o'clock, from Fifth avenue and Market street and preceeding by way of Bigelow boulevard through East Liberty, out Frankstown avenue to Sandy Creek road, through Verona to Woodlawn and Oakmont avenues, returning by the same route. It was also announced that the Oakland-Willows Pool trips have been discontinued.

FLORIST VICTIM OF ACCIDENT

The mystery surrounding the death of Daniel M. Chambers, young Braddock florist, was cleared today. County detectives are convinced Chambers met an accidental death.

They based their conclusion on testimony of two young men who told of "making a night of it" with Chambers from 1 to 4 a. m. This is the story of the two, Clyde Price, 24, of 206 Lobinger avenue, North Braddock, and Frank Ross, 24, of Cincinnati, who is visiting friends in Braddock:

Price and Chambers, old friends, had had several friendly arguments during which Chambers took Price's coat. They shook hands, "made up," and Price jokingly remarked he had no coat. Chambers offered to sacrifice his, left the car they were in, walked to the nearby Pittsburgh-Duquesne Junction Bridge and tossed his coat to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks.

Chambers failed to return to the car and his friends searched the territory for him. They called in others, and Chambers was found along the tracks, one foot severed, the other crushed. Price and Ross could not see whether he jumped from the bridge.

Detectives believe Chambers may have walked to the tracks to recover his coat and have been struck by a train.

Price and Ross were detained by county detectives as witnesses. Detectives believe their story, and announced the men would be released. The coroner is expected to release them.

U. S. Warrant Out For Liquor Convict

A bench warrant was issued in Federal Court for the arrest of Stanley Dobkowski, of Erie, Pa., convicted bootlegger, for commitment to the Allegheny County jail for a six months' sentence imposed in September, 1927, for transporting liquor. When imposed, the court directed the sentence was to start at the expiration of a 21 months' term in the government penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., for conspiring to violate the national prohibition law.

ZEP'S SPIRIT CAUGHT BY WILKINS

By SIR HUBERT WILKINS,

Famous explorer, who crossed the Atlantic aboard the Graf Zeppelin from Friedrichshafen, and is writing the story of the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-world Fight.

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 10.—We are now speeding along at 80 miles an hour (at 10 o'clock local time or 6 p. m., New York Daylight Time) and expect to get our first sight of England at Lands End about midnight. Then we will make directly for London.

This cruise across the Atlantic will must certainly break the record set by the Zeppelin last year. Dr. Eckener is smiling and happy, and the passengers and officers have caught his mood, which is nothing if not triumphant.

ATTAINS HIGH SPEED

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 9.—The Graf Zeppelin, sailing along in the northern reaches of the Atlantic and frequently reaching a speed of 100 miles an hour, is now streaking its way for the Irish coast, intent on finding its berth in Friedrichshafen at twilight tomorrow.

When the sun was only two hours old this morning it ate up the cumulus clouds which have crowded the sky at all altitudes, leaving long strata trailing and parallel with our course.

Dr. Eckener, profoundly weather-wise, elevated the Zeppelin to an altitude of 1,500 feet and was rewarded with air currents which have hurried us along at a tremendous rate, sometimes adding as high as 35 miles an hour to the Zeppelin's cruising rate of 65.

This unexpected windfall is stimulating the jubilation aboard, and all, especially the officers, are confident of breaking the trans-Atlantic record set at 68 hours, 46 minutes by the Graf Zeppelin last October 31.

NEARS EUROPE

ABOARD THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, Aug. 9.—Our second breakfast passed off remarkably well as we sped toward the port of Friedrichshafen, north of the Azores, and constantly drawing nearer the outposts of the European coast.

The menu was somewhat altered, of course, because this is not only the greatest dirigible afloat, but also the one place in the world that one may have the best of home-cooked meals and still not be tied to solid earth.

We retired early this morning, and after a good, sound sleep, heard from Dr. Eckener at breakfast that we had used up only about 1,570 miles of our round-trip ticket in the first 23 hours of 24 hours' fight. That is making good speed—between 65 and 70 miles an hour—and we should be in Friedrichshafen by twilight Saturday, according to the commander's calculations.

We passed into the clouds at 9 last night. The lights in the saloon cast on the light gray surfaces shadows that pulsated from dark, indistinct, blurred masses to sharply defined silhouettes, depending on our distance from the clouds. In reality, the shadowgraph constituted a camera obscura.

HELMSMAN ALERT

The conditions of the flight now necessitated the strict attention of the ship's helmsmen to the instruments, their only guides in the sphere above the earth. Our crew of veterans is skilled to the finest point, but yet the ship undulates under such trying circumstances.

Leeds and other airplane men aboard realize how difficult airplane operation is in such conditions.

From 9 until 11 o'clock last night we drove through the clouds and then beneath them, at from 600 feet to 1,000 feet altitude.

It is now 2 o'clock (Eastern Standard Time), and 4 o'clock in the morning (local time). Our position is 42.30 N. latitude, 40.30 West longitude. We just passed the freighter Madaket, bound for Liverpool.

We are making great headway, having done 70 knots since half an hour ago, when we picked up a strong tailing wind, drifting us slightly north, but still along the Great Circle course. The heading for the Azores was only momentary, when Dr. Eckener thought the winds would be more favorable in that direction.

Due to resurfacing work on the Noblestown road between Oakdale and McDonald, the last direct route for automobile travel between Pittsburgh and Steubenville is closed, officials of the Pittsburgh Automobile Club said last night. Club officials advised automobile drivers to take the long route through Washington and Wellsburg.

Luke Cosgrove On Final Tour

Luke Cosgrave, the grand old histrionic hero of Utah, pens ye bureau an epistle from distant Salt Lake City. Luke writes that he is on the first lap of a personal appearance tour that will carry him through those sections of Utah and Idaho he played for nigh onto 30 years, when he headed his own traveling stock company. He enclosed, too, a playbill. There's a quaint combination of pathos and bravery about this thin strip of playbill, which reads:

Tell All the Folks
Luke's acomin' back
From Colorful Hollywood For A Farewell Appearance.
Old Actor's Last Stand In:
"Lights of Long Ago."
See The World's Most Famous Actors In Their Greatest Roles.
AND Hollywood From The Inside.

Yep, Luke has gone home to tell the folks about his years in the picture colony. His farewell appearance. And then he returns to Hollywood and to the next reeler that Jim Cruze will make.

Kipling Needs To Watch Step

Al Dubin, of the song writing team of Dubin and Burke, once wrote a popular hit yclept "A Fool There Was." It so chanced that Dubin once knew a coupla bohunks in his native Philadelphia who learned to hoof and graduated into voodvil. Shortly after his song do-de-do-ed on the country's domestic pianos, the bohunks returned from a tour. They looked up Dubin pronto. "Looka here," one of 'em slung a raft of postal cards at him. "We think you orta know about this, Al. Some guy out west named Rudyard Kipling is stealing your thunder for this racket." And bless your heart, part of Kipling's poem, "A Fool There Was," graced the cards. Much to the bohunks' surprise, however, Dubin showed absolutely no indignation.

Which reminds me of the story they tell about Victor Herbert. Herbert went to hear his then current operetta hit on Broadway. He sat in the balcony. He hummed along with the orchestra in absent-minded fashion. A guy sitting next to him could stand it no longer. "Say," he snarled, "I didn't pay to listen to you. Shut up or get out, will you?" And Mr. Herbert meekly shushed.

Returns

Anne Forrest, leading woman in stock in the Pitt for two seasons, rejoins the George Sharp Players for next week only, to be seen in "Scrambled Wives."

Their real name department: Nancy Carroll, Nancy Lahiff.

Beatrice Lillie Meets Real Gent

Screenalities: Lois Wilson vowing she's so sun-blacked folks scarcely know her. Which isn't perzactly true. Lois has started rehearsals with H. B. Warner in "The Dark Swan" out in the blasting San Fernandez valley, where the First National lot roams . . . Beatrice Lillie singing a song or two at a social gathering. Some chap yells a song at her which stumps Miss Lillie. Whereupon said Chappie, being a perfect gen'men, leers: "Gowan, you know it. Why, I remember you from the old Soho days." Which, naturally, ended the informal entertainment . . . An original story of some nature of other is being penned for John Barrymore yclept "The Man." Hear tell Al Green will megaphone . . . Ramon Novarro has begun work on his new flick. But Ramon is such a quiet soul one doesn't know he's in town. He isn't a Hollywood-ite in the social sense. He doesn't even live in Hollywood. Ramon has a beautiful, rambly mansion down in Los Angeles, surrounded by trees and gardens and the stuff poets achieve immortality through. Of tonsorial interest: Hear tell that Norma Shearer has bobbed her hair . . . and—that's all.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.

THAT the best mosquito bite remedy is tooth paste.

That the President of the United States cannot be arrested even for murder.

That shaving doesn't make the beard grow faster.

That books in their present form were invented by Attalus, King of Pergamus in 887.

That Matthew Vassar who founded that femme college (where they are expelled if they are caught drinking) was a brewer.

That most of Broadway really is in the Hudson River where they dumped the rock and dirt when they dug the subway.

That there are 25 mountains in Colorado higher than Pike's Peak, which proves that it pays to advertise.

That a recently opened bank in Brooklyn was built entirely on the unclaimed savings deposits.

That the reason feminine underthings are usually pink or blue is that white turns yellow the first time it is laundered.

That it takes five years and two months to make the sounding board of a high-grade piano.

AIN'T THAT TOUGH

THAT doctors may operate on their family but undertakers are prohibited by law from burying their own dead.

That the U. S. doesn't own the Panama Canal Zone.

That there's a new lens that can be 15 feet out of focus and 25 feet from the subject and still get a swell shot; and that German and Swiss oculists went mad trying to perfect what a Mr. Beach, of Buffalo, accomplished.

That the cost of the equipment necessary to maintain a train such as The Twentieth Century is exactly $1,064,000.

That if you rub a book of wet matches (the heads) on your fingers you can erase nicotine stains.

That most women get that glossy effect by instructing the hairdresser to give them a vinegar rinse before the final drying.

That "The Broadway Melody" is a dead ringer for "While I'm Adoring You," a 1919 hit.

TIP WILL BE WELCOME

THAT Peggy Joyce hides her jewels under her bed, confident that that would be the last place thieves would look for them.

That etaoin shrdlu, the first two lines on a linotype machine, are the 12 most commonly used letters in the English tongue, in the order of their commonness.

That a Scotland yard is only 35 inches.

That the largest restaurant in the world (the Gateway Casino), with a capacity of 3,331 guests, is located at Somers Point, N. J., which has a summer population of 2,000 and a winter one of 200.

That before glass mirrors were first made by Venetians in the thirteenth century people primped before polished metal.

That people with names such as Goldberg or Rosenstein can now walk at night in Rumania, which is negotiating a U. S. loan again.

That F. P. A. discovered there is no rhyme for Pershing.

JUST A DABBLER

THAT Oliver Wendell Holmes, one of the greatest of American poets, was only a spare-time word-juggler, devoting most of his time to medicine.

That cats cannot see better at night than in the day.

That the "Spirit of St. Louis" earth inductor compass at the Smithsonian Institution is not the one that guided Lindy to Paris. An army mechanic ruined the original by putting in the wrong fluid when the plane was in Washington and the crumpled dial is now a pal's prize.

That Arthur Brown and others are amazed over the excitement of people wearing pajamas when Chinamen have been doing it for years.

That the boy who "stood on the burning deck" really lived and his name was Casabianca and he was 10 years old.

TRY TO FIND IT

THAT if you found a cubic foot of gold you couldn't pick it up with your hands unless you can lift 1,200 pounds.

That Alfred Nobel, the Swede who gives away medals and prizes for the furtherance of peace, invented dynamite in 1867.

That Steinmetz, the electrical wizard, defined a highbrow as "any person that is educated beyond his intelligence."

That Irene Franklin, who made herself and the song "Redhead" famous, will wear tights in the first act of "Sweet Adeline."

That chewing of lemon rind shoos onion breath.

That milk is heavier than cream.

That the first bathtub was used in America in 1842.

And that two years later a law prohibiting the taking of a bath in Philadelphia was defeated by only two votes!

Will Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 10.

It seems odd that I should be the one to instruct America on historical facts, but it is the birthday of our very excellent President, Mr. Hoover. He was born fifty-five years ago in the Middle West—must have been Iowa, for he moved to California.

There was no professional football in colleges in those days, so he had to actually work his way through. He studied engineering, and a beautiful young co-ed, who afterwards turned out to be Mrs. Hoover. Both occupations were of tremendous future value.

He has seen more of the world (not only of any President), but of more than any Notre Dame football team. He has no use for politicians, which fact elected him by the largest majority ever recorded. If he will just continue to hate them, we are liable to wake up with another Lincoln, or Jefferson on our hands.

Yours, WILL.

Warrior

Al. St. John, film comic, is a member of the cast of "She Goes to War," screen feature in the Aldine next week.

CO-ED ACCUSES PANTAGES

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—(INS.)—Alexander T. Pantages, multi-millionaire Pacifice Coast vaudeville theater magnate, was under arrest here today on a serious charge preferred by Miss Eunice Pringle, 16, University of Southern California co-ed and dancer.

Miss Pringle declared Pantages attacked her when she called at his office to secure booking of her dancing act. Pantages told police the charge was "nothing but blackmail."

During the past month Pantages disposed of several of his theaters in deals aggregating more than $15,000,000.

Pantages' wife, Lois, now is at liberty on bail of $50,000 on a charge of manslaughter growing out of the killing of a Japanese struck by an automobile driven by her in June.

Talker

PARIS, France.

DEAUVILLE by train is about four hours from Paris. It is a fashionable resort for the playboys and their girls, suggesting Atlantic City with its beach and boardwalk, which, however, is not the immense affair it is in the New Jersey resort. At night the boys and girls go to the Casino, where they gamble to their hearts content. Through the week crowds are not big, but the week-ends see the Parisians come in for Saturday and Sunday bathing. It is swanky. The bathing costumes would bring a protest from the chief of police of Atlantic City.

* * *

Deauville is only a half-hour ride by ferry from La Havre, where boats are ready to bring back tourists.

It is in taking care of your baggage where you meet the real highwaymen of Europe, the baggage men who take your grips.

So far as I could learn there is no set charge for this work and the tourist pays what he would pay in the States for such service. But the baggage men give everyone an argument and try to bully the tourists into paying excessive charges. It doesn't do well to argue too much for they will cause a scene; a gendarme will come along, twirl his mustache, and on the slightest provocation begin making out a voluminous written report of the disturbance, during which one see one's ship for home sail away without one.

* * *

TO the uninitiated, a ship putting out to sea is a stirring and touching sight. No matter how engineering and the radio have reduced the hazard of sea travel, there always is the knowledge that traveling 3,000 miles through water is still a bit of an adventure. Even the hard-boiled sailors can be seen taking a last look at land as the liner moves away from the dock.

At the railing you see 'kerchiefs fluttering even after the land has grown dim.

* * *

Boat passengers who get seasick are properly ashamed of the fact and attribute their illness to everything but the rock of the boat. There is the fellow who likes to boast he hasn't missed a meal on an ocean liner in 10 years of fairly regular travel. Then there is the fellow, who immune from seasickness, gets unholy delight out of seeing some of the boys and girls dash to the rail.

* * *

ON the first day no one knows the person next to him, but in a few days total strangers are caling each other Ollie and romances bud and bloom in great profusion. It would be my guess the curve of matrimonial statistics must take a leap with each docking, but more sophisticated persons tell me that such is not the case and that the steamship romances are fleeting affairs and the ardent attention showered by Jack upon Jill somehow fade away and die once land hoves into sight.

The love-making aboard ship is pretty much in the open. It is not unusual to walk around the deck about 3 o'clock of an afternoon to find Rollo and his Janice in the throes of a prolonged kiss, with only 400 persons observing with some interest.

* * *

The smoking room, of course, is the favorite rendezvous. Here the Garcons bring the products from the French vineyards and the popping of the corks begins early and continues late. Around 2 o'clock in the morning you know the end is not far away for at yonder table the boys are tuning up with: "When You Wore a Tulip," quite a song, I understand, for a good baritone.

But with all the merry-making, there is seldom a passenger who does not look at his watch and ask everyone on the boat: "What time do you think we'll get in?"

SERMONETTE

"THE PASSPORT OF THE SOUL"

JOHN 14:6

By REV. J. GRANT WALTER,
Pastor St. Mark's Memorial Reformed Church

REV. J. GRANT WALTER

SOMEONE has said, "The only excuse for creation is man." Mankind is the explanation of Christianity. Jesus Christ is the supreme person in history. The son of man, the embodiment of all that is essentially human. He is the Way—we are trying to walk in it. And the Truth—we accept it. And the Life—God help us to live it. What reaction does His life set up in your life? We are here face to face with three facts.

Religion is not only a creed but an experience. Creeds are to religion what bones are to the body. When Christ came, man saw religion. Nicodemus knew many things, but not till that eventful night did he understand religion. Christ's is the only religion that makes men better. One must experience a change from bad to good—must "Grow in grace." Christ shows the way to that end.

Religion is an inspiration. It has a positive as well as a negative side. Christ hates sin, but loves the sinner. He makes one leave the bad by falling in love with the good. He gives us something to take the place of the bad in our lives. Christ in us—the truth of God having a place in our lives. One thinks of Enoch, who walked with God; Jeremiah, who wept himself into victory in the presence of God; or Elijah, the man of great moral strength and personality, who went all to pieces when he looked at the wicked Ahab's world; but in a moment of inspiration said to the people, come near me, I am going to pray, and when he prayed, fire came down and God was honored. True religion is an inspiration.

Religion is not only an assurance for the world to come, but a program for here and now. It is more than a scheme to dodge hell and gain heaven. Christ has given us a work program for here and now. What are we here for? Service! To make the world a better place in which to live. Some think religion a pretty good thing to die by, but its main purpose is to teach us how to live. Dying is easy, it is living that is hard. True religion is putting one's soul into the task that is before him. The field, the shop, the farm, the bank, the home, citizenship, the polls. One says, "You can't be in business and be a Christian." The Syrians thought Jehovah was god of the hills, but never entered the valley below. The ancient Greeks thought Neptune dwelt in the sea, but on land men could do about as they pleased. There are those today who think God dwells in churches and cemeteries, and some homes, but not in stores, and mills, and schools, and shops. The crying need is to take God into Wall Street, State Street, and the Strand and live him there. That does not mean that we are to throw away our nets and stop fishing. Everything has its place, only we must not put things above life. How does your religion express itself? If He is the Way, let us walk in that way. The Truth, let us believe it. The Life, let us live it. Verily, this is the passport of the soul.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

C. B. Dunbars Visiting Mrs. Wallace H. Rowe At Watch Hill

NO one expects very much in the way of gay parties on a hazy Saturday in August, here in Pittsburgh, so I am sure you won't be surprised to find your attention turned elsewhere. Nearly everyone is away from home, anyway, and an occasional visit to the country club provides the major part of the stay-at-homes' amusement.

According the travelers their natural place in the spotlight, let me tell you that Mrs. Wallace Hurtte Rowe, who has been spending the summer at Watch Hill, you know, —the name of her home there is "Wetumanetu," by the way—has as her guests her daughter and son-in-law, the C. Billups Dunbars, of Augusta, Ga. They expect to be with Mrs. Rowe all month, I understand.

Another visitor at the same resort has been Edward Hill, of this city, who was the guest of Anne Johnson at the summer home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Johnson, of Washington, D. C. Mr. Hill has returned home now but while he was at Watch Hill he was a guest at a number of parties.

Leaving home next week is one of next winter's debutantes and her mother, Mrs. James Hay Reed, Jr., with her debutante daughter, Frances, and son, James Hay Reed III, of Castleman place, are going up to Bigwin Inn, in Canada, and they expect to remain there until the middle of September.

Among the "out-of-towners," too, are Mr. and Mrs. William Ayers Galbraith, of Woodlawn road, Sewickley. They are visiting Mrs. Galbraith's sister, Mrs. William Welch Collin, Jr., at Kennebunkport, Me., and later they are planning to go to Hyannisport for a week. At Kennebunkport, also, are the A. W. McEldowneys and their daughter, Jane, of Westminster place, who have a cottage there.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanson Thomas and their children, Judith and Hanson, Jr., of Edgeworth, are at their summer cottage at Cooperstown, N. Y., and Judge J. A. Evans, of Beaver road, Sewickley, is spending the summer with his daughter, Mrs. Don Rose, at her summer cottage on Ahmic Lake, Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Graham Meyer and their daughter, Louise, of Wightman street, and Mr. and Mrs. Dudley S. Liggett, of Howe street, are sailing today for Paris. Later, I understood, they are planning to take a motor trip through France, Switzerland, Germany, Holland and England.

AN AUGUST wedding is a very important matter, isn't it, since their number is so few. I've just heard that the engagement of Dorothea Smith, daughter of the Frank W. Smiths, of Cambridge, Mass., and Henry C. Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Fisher, of Westminster place, which was announced last month, is to terminate in a wedding on Tuesday, August 20. The ceremony will be performed that afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Smith home with only members of the two families as guests.

Kury, of Pittsburgh, a cousin, will be best man. After a trip, Mr. and Mrs. Riker will be at home in Etna. Miss Logan was guest of honor at a bridge party given on Thursday by Mrs. W. A. Kury and her daughter, Miss Blanche Kury, in their home in Fairston street, Sheraden.

* * *

THE marriage of Miss Eloise Ernest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Van C. Ernest, of Thomas boulevard, and Harry Ewing Longmore was solemnized last night in the Ernest home by the Rev. Dr. Kinley McMillin. The bride wore pale blue chiffon and carried pine roses, while her maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Crim, appeared in beige chiffon and carried yellow tea roses. Allan Ernest, brother of the bride, was best man. A dinner followed the ceremony and later Mr. and Mrs. Longmore left for a motor trip through New York.

MONDAY, September 2, is the date chosen for the wedding of Miss Katherine Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Anderson, of Church avenue, Ben Avon, and John Dearing, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dearing, of Jamestown, N. Y. The ceremony will be performed in the garden of the Anderson summer home at Conneaut Lake. Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

What a Wife Knows

THAT strange look on a woman's face, when she discovers that another woman is trying to vamp her husband, is not so often prompted by indignation as by astonishment.

* * *

Nobody is so surprised as the average wife, when another woman tries to drape her perfectly good, but awfully human, husband in the glorified garments of a Romeo.

* * *

That another woman should regard in a romantic light the man whom she has been dosing with bi-carbonate of soda, reminding to wear his rubbers and to get his hair cut, and rubbing with unguentine or camphorated oil for ten or fifteen years, seems almost incredible.

HELEN ROWLAND

* * *

It positively amazes her, that another woman could possibly perceive a dashing Prince Charming or a reckless adventurer, in the timid soul, who dares not eat cucumbers, is afraid of draughts, and permits the traffic-cop to bawl him out, without a protest.

* * *

It quite astounds a seasoned wife, to learn that some other woman can actually "dream" of the man who looks like a convict when he needs a shave and is slightly bow-legged in his bathing-suit.

* * *

It always dumfounds her to discover that another woman regards as "shikish" or "It-ish" or "irresistible," the nice, old, absentminded soul, who has been inertly pecking her on the cheek, night and morning, ever since the honeymoon, and who never notices whether she has on her motorcoat or her backless evening gown.

* * *

It is a deep-dark mystery to HER, how any woman could picture as "dangerously fascinating," or bold and audacious, the perfectly harmless creature, whom she has heard groaning and spluttering under the cold shower; whose diet she has had to regulate in order to reduce his fast increasing girth, and whose scalp she has had to massage in order to preserve the few precious tendrils over his bald-spot.

* * *

Or, how any woman can visualize as a gallant Lothario, the helpless creature who stands before her in his wrinkled pajamas, suppressing a yawn with one hand and ruffling up his hair with the other, as he wildly wonders WHAT he did with his glasses.

* * *

It's no use! A woman may love her husband and fully appreciate all his charms and virtues. She may even concede that he looks well in evening clothes, and better than most men in his golf knickers. But, she cannot understand any woman clinging for solace or romance to the man that she has had to put to bed with a sick headache and get out of bed with an alarm clock, every morning.

* * *

Nor, see how any woman can regard as alluring or diverting, the man who talks to her only of his teeth, his golf, his digestion and the stock market.

* * *

After ten long years of marriage, no woman can visualize her plain John as another woman's Don Juan. That's the secret of the odd look in a wife's eyes, when she watches the "other woman." She is trying to control, not her jealousy, but her amazement—and amusement!!

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Drinking at Wayside Springs Dangerous

VACATIONS are joyful periods, but they may be dangerous, too. Watch the papers after Labor Day and see what numbers of typhoid fever cases develop. The home water supplies are properly supervised, but wayside springs and streams may be teeming with the germs of disease. Vacationists are careless and some of them will pick up typhoid.

DR. COPELAND

Years ago the well-to-do residents of districts where malaria abounded, used to go to the seashore or the mountains at the season when it prevailed. They did this to escape the "miasm," the poisoned air, which they believed was responsible for the disease.

When I was a boy they knew that the swamps and low lands were dangerous. But they didn't know the real reason. In my boyhood I heard a famous physician say that the "malarious air" cannot rise above 50 feet. He advised building homes on elevated spots so as to escape malaria.

Now we know that it is the mosquito, a certain type of mosquito, that conveys malaria. The ancients recognized that marsh lands bred the disease, but overlooked the fact that the mosquitoes which bred there wre th ral offenders.

A person who has the parasites of malaria in his blood, is bitten by a mosquito. The organisms are taken into the body of the mosquito. Certain changes take place, preparing the poison so it will thrive in the salivary glands of the insect. This process takes a couple of weeks.

The inoculated mosquito is now prepared to pass on to well human beings the organisms which have developed in the manner I have explained. This insect bites its unfortunate victim. A portion of the infected saliva is injected into the skin.

The organisms which are introduced into the body attack the red corpuscles of the blood. Here new organisms develop and poisons are generated. It is not long before the corpuscles are destroyed. Then the young parasites and the poisons get into the blood stream. A violent chill is the first sign of trouble.

The infected person is now ready to act as a carrier to inoculate other mosquitoes. They pass it on to their human neighbors and pretty soon the entire community has malaria.

We have learned how to escape malaria. By draining the swamps and screening our homes we do not get somebody else's malaria. Likewise if one of us happens to be a carrier of malaria, the mosquitoes are not there to pass it on to others of the family or in the neighborhood.

Malaria is practically unknown today in well-ordered communities. Each of us must do his part to wipe out the breeding places of an insect that can do great harm if inoculated with the organisms of the disease.

Horoscopes

Sunday, August 11.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds promise of peace, harmony, friendship and uplift of mind, soul and spirit. The day will be sacred to mystical, social and cultural pursuits and avocations which should transcend trivial anxieties.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of rather peculiar angles to business activities, centering largely on new projects; but the social, domestic and affectional interests may be uppermost, unless the business affiliations partake of this character.

A child born on this day should be artistic, cultural, amiable and popular, leaning more to the fine and subtle in its practical activities.

Monday, August 12.

ALTHOUGH this day's sidereal operations point to very lively and energetic activities, yet there is forecast of a hostile force which may manifest with much antagonism. There is a sign of aggravated malevolence, which may be circumvented by complete discretion and self-control. Employment and the purely personal relations are under this menace.

Those whose birthday it is have some prospects of gain and recognition for industry and application during the year, but there are also hostile conditions which may be best disposed by maintaining a calm and discreet attitude and persistent application to affairs in hand. Be careful not to imperil the employment or the personal relations.

A child born on this day may be energetic, resourceful, industrious and persistent and yet it may find difficult situations and malevolent attacks to dispose of by wisdom and calmness.

Little minds are tamed and subdued by misfortune, but great minds rise above them.—Irving.

PAST AND PRESENT

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

IF THE curtain could be pulled aside from the past and allow our grandmothers and great-grandmothers to see the present, I wonder what would happen? Naturally, their first thought would be one of shocked silence. And no wonder! For in those days it took yards and yards of material to fashion one of their frocks, and they had voluminous petticoats and pantalettes to hide their dainty ankles. The head-dresses took hours and hours to arrange, and as for appearing in public without dainty lace mitts—why it was almost a crime!

And if they could see the girls of the present day with their abbreviated costumes, the suntan backed dresses, bare legs with tiny socks, shorn heads with curls blowing in the breeze and a healthy coat of tan they'd faint, I haven't the least doubt.

And yet—perhaps their amazement would be tempered with envy. For the girls today are certainly healthier if not happier than were those girls of the olden times.

No chaperons "cramp their style." They are free and laughing and happy and healthy and wise. And 'way down underneath they're the same girls their ancestors were—with the same hopes of love and search for romance. For, after all, they're all sisters under the skin, and through all their phases from Mother Eve to the present day, their ultimate goal is just—Love and Happiness—no matter what the mode of the moment may be.

Madge and Noel Consider Means to Conquer Philip's Plans

AT Noel's querry concerning his father, I felt as if someone had opened a door and let in an icy draught. In my enthusiastic plans for so manipulating the "international romance" that Prince Georges and Princess Olina would return to their respective countries cured of their infatuations, thus leaving Mary and Noel to each other, I had indeed forgotten Philip Veritzen and his implacable determination that his son should marry Princess Olina.

But I would not let Noel see my consternation. He—poor lad—was down-hearted enough without adding a feather's weight to his burden. So I made my voice as cheery as possible and answered with a mendacity which I hoped my particular recording angel would forgive for its motive:

"No, I have not forgotten your father, I know that he is bitterly opposed to your marrying Mary."

"I don't think it is that so much as that he wishes me to marry Princess Olina," Noel replied slowly as if he were trying to put missing pieces into a picture puzzle.

"He really likes Mary, but he has seemed to me absolutely mad upon the subject of my marrying this girl whom I supposed to be Eleanor Jackson.

"Now I realize why. I know that old story, you see. Always my father kept a photograph of Queen Olga upon his private desk. It was the only thing I ever knew my mother to be other than gentle about. She never showed her feeling to my father—she was too proud and sensitive—but when she thought she was alone, I have seen her take that picture and look at it with hatred distorting her lovely, gentle face. I—loved my mother—very dearly—and—I am not going to find it easy, on her account alone, to pretend to be devoted to Queen Olga's daughter."

I put my hand out impulsively and covered his.

"I know," I said, feeling within me a fierce resentment against Philip Veritzen for his thoughtlessness. I acquitted him of conscious cruelty for I conjectured that his proud little wife never had let him dream of her wild jealousy of a photograph.

"But don't you see that this is your only chance. If you break the engagement with Olina, your father never will forgive you. If, on the contrary she tires of you—"

"Oh!! I see your plan," he said breathlessly. "But," suddenly becoming downcast again, "I am afraid he will be terribly angry anyway. He will say that having won her, I should be able to hold her."

I had no answer ready for this plaint which I felt was only too true, and after a second Noel went on.

"If only I were not so dependent upon my father!" he said. "You see he has it in his power to withhold all my mother's property from me until I am thirty-five—all, that is except the small income which now suffices for my small wants, but which never would care for a wife properly. And I never was taught anything useful. Even my musical education unfitted me for anything practical. Those months of playing in that night club were torture to me. I'll never go back to that even if I starve. If only I could get further along in my scores. Why, do you know the few things I have sold haven't paid for my piano rent? Of course, I never dared to put them out under my own name, for my father would have considered that I had disgraced it, so I used the name Boris Raminoff. You may have happened to see it sometim," he finished modestly.

"Indeed I've seen it, Noel," I answered, trying to make my voice matter-of-fact, for I did not wish to startle him in his shy confidences by showing the surprise I felt at his revelation. For I had read several written comments upon the musical work of Boris Raminoff and realized that while the name had no particular financial value, yet he already had secured a distinct foothold in the world of real music. "And I wish to congratulate you. Your father will regret sometime that you did not use your own name. Boris Raminoff's work is recognized as masterly."

He flushed with pleasure. "I'd like to tell you something about something. I've been at work on for years," he said—"an ambitious thing enough—a musical drama—almost operatic, with historical background. But I cannot get the libretto right. I'm no good on that end. And I haven't any idea of how it should be produced. If only I inherited some of my father's genius. But I am my mother's boy alone, I guess She was musical but I have heard my father say she had no sense of the dramatic and that she was too sensitive and self-conscious to be at ease, and sure of herself as a successful person must be."

My heart was not against Philip Veritzen. Suddenly I felt an overwhelming desire to prove that Noel's genius was fully as great as that of his father. It was as if a ghostly sign of yearning had reached me from the long-dead lips of Noel's gentle and unappreciated mother. I wanted to answer that wraith-like appeal. Yet how could I manage it?

Farewells Matters of Importance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Angry Partings Weaken Foundation of Love and Often Causes Ruin

LOVERS' partings!

How they echo down the ages like strains of music from the moonlit night when Queen Dido "stood with a willow in her hand upon the wild seabanks and waft her love to come again to Carthage," down to the latest brave farewell between the overseas flier and his wife, and your own good night to your sweetheart last evening!

Of course, lovers do not always say goodby in the poetic language of Shakespearean characters. But is there not beauty and a touch of sadness in all partings of those who love? Who can say what may happen before these two meet again? Every goodby may be the last. We know this—feel it like a gray shadow—but crowd the thought back into the farthest recess of the heart and hastily turn the key.

Most partings, fortunately, have more of hope and assurance than of sorrow. Still, there is always an element of uncertainty in human affairs. If only for this reason, it is well to make every goodby kindly and understanding.

* * *

According to their letters, many correspondents are inclined to toy with the ideas of the final farewell.

"I never want to see you again! Don't even try to speak to me!" cries Anne when Jack has been, let us say, unreasonably jealous or in an indifferent mood.

In her heart, Anne hopes that within five minutes Jack will come flying back, arms extended, begging her to "make up and start all over again!" Then will come the joy of reconciliation. But will this happen? Possibly, after the first angry parting—or even the second. But Jack has his share of pride and temper, so that impulsive parting may, indeed, prove final.

It may be that Jack is the peremptory partner to the courtship.

"Very well!" he storms. "If you want to accept other invitations than mine, go right ahead! But I'm through!"

Then he calls up the next morning, apologizing, explaining to Anne how much he really does care, and how he hopes one day to ask her to be his wife—just as soon as that raise in salary at the office comes.

The "forever farewell" idea is dangerous to play with, for it is likely to be taken literally by one of the two most concerned. The average girl, the moment she dismisses a young man "forever," discovers how much she loves him and wants to win him back. But this is not always easy. As a direct reaction to an angry dismissal, many a young man has immediately proposed to another girl, who may be the wrong girl, and has been accepted.

Every angry parting, provided the quarrel is serious, weakens the foundation of love until finally the structure is likely to tumble in ruins!

There are times, of course, when it is wise to say "Goodby, forever!" and mean it. If a young man and girl are unsuitable or cannot get on without constant bickering, regardless of how fascinated both may be, what is the use of their marrying? In such a cause it is wise to say "Goodby—this is the end!"—and stick to it.

An angry parting now and then may be inevitable in the average love affair and marriage, since most men and women are far from saints in temper and temperament. Possibly, a too-sugary love affair might cloy. But when on rare occasions, you find yourself in a huff or he is in a stormy mood, see to it that there are no imperative final farewells. Never suggest a final parting.

Farewells are an infinitely important factor of love—of this there can be no doubt! The impression hubby gets of a smiling wife, in a becoming house-dress, waving goodby as he turns the corner lingers with him all day. His not-too-hasty kiss and reassuring words of affection—his praise of her coffee or appreciation of the lone rose on the breakfast table, bring to Mrs. Newly-Wed a glow of happiness.

* * *

Don't neglect the farewell moment—make it count! It takes but an instant and means much to Dan Cupid.

To return to friendship and courtship problems, it is well as a rule, in parting from your friend or sweetheart, to let him name the next meeting. He will suggest it if he is eager. If he is not, your "When am I going to see you again?" may prove over-flattering and boring.

Even more essential to love than agreeable meetings are agreeable partings—not necessarily long-drawn-out, but refreshing, leaving a happy memory and hope, but not satiety.

Do not take a depressed mood too seriously. Perhaps you can humor him with a little gayety and charm. If you cannot and find yourself annoyed, you might remark when he departs, "I hope when we meet again you will be a little better-humored!" or words to that effect.

If he wishes he will offer to explain why he is moody.

Household Hints

Use a small quantity of vinegar in a cake if you run short of eggs.

Castor oil becomes tasteless if beaten up with the white of an egg.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Gratitude for Shower Presents.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am about to be married, and one of my friends has planned a shower in my home. I have never attended a shower. Will you please tell me how I should act when the presents are given to me? Also what should I say?

GERTRUDE.

AS SIMPLY and sincerely as possible thank each guest for her thoughtfulness and for her present, as that present is presented to you. Something like this is appropriate: "How very kind of you to think so beautifully of me. What a glorious vase—such wondrous color and design." Or, "You are most kind, Mrs. Williams. How did you know that I have dreamed of having a portfolio, though, of course, I never thought that I should own such a lovely one?" Or, "Isn't this book characteristic of your lovely taste? And at last I own a complete set of Shelley!"

In other words, thank honestly for the friendliness and thoughtfulness that prompted the sending of the gift, that urged your friend to bring something that she planned for your happiness, and then say something as appreciative as possible—and definite, too—about the gift itself, mentioning it by name, and not vaguely saying "your gift." Before you go to the shower get yourself in the frame of mind that understands the sweetness, the care, the careful budgeting, perhaps, of a personal account, the amount of shopping, and the charming taste that was put into the choice of each gift. Then thank for that. Be appreciative, dear friend, and that will make the givers see that you are a kindly intentioned person yourself.

And don't forget that, besides this expression of thanks, which must necessarily be very hasty, you should write to each giver the next day or a few days after a note of thanks for her gift. This need not be a long note, but should be deep with gratitude.

The "Draping Era" Is Over.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Which is correct?

For a man to take a woman's arm while walking, or for a woman to take the man's arm?

2. Will you please criticise my handwriting? BETTY.

NEITHER is correct, unless the woman needs assistance, as when crossing a crowded street, and then the man offers her his arm. It is extremely bad form for a man to take a woman's arm—this should never be done. For casual walking, it is best for a girl and a man to walk independently. The "draping" era is over, as far as good manners in public are concerned!

2. Your handwriting has an excellent basic quality, and, though it is somewhat immature now, this good quality at the foundation will strengthen and become more interesting. It is delightfully legible and clear. Be careful of your letter-spacing — don't crowd one page and write nothing on the next. Leave even margins on all four sides of your pages. And do not abbreviate on your envelope and in the heading of your letter.

STRONG BUYING LIFTS STOCK MARKET

Heavy Support Turns Stocks About After Break; Advances Wide

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—(AP.)—Strong buying support came into the stock market overnight after yesterday's drastic break, General Electric opened 7 points higher, Missouri Pacific 6, and American Can, American Smelting, American Telephone and Nash Motors showed initial gains of 2 to 2½ points.

New York Central, Westinghouse Electric, Consolidated Gas and United Corporation opened a point or so higher. The first sale of U. S. Steel common was a block of 8,000 shares at 215¼, up 1¾.

In view of the many margin calls which went out last night, the strong opening was somewhat of a surprise to many traders who expected a renewal of selling pressure. Speculative confidence was partly restored by the reassuring statements of bankers that the action of the Federal Reserve actually would tend to ease general credit conditions and facilitate the movement of crops and the normal fall expansion in business.

The initial rally was followed by a brief flurry of selling, but offerings were readily absorbed, and the market headed upward again. Westinghouse Electric, Consolidated Gas, American Tobacco B and Standard Gas and Electric sold 3 or more points higher before the end of the first half hour. United Aircraft quickly made up its loss.

Scores of issues, which were under pressure yesterday, recorded early gains of a point or more, the list including Bethlehem Steel, Marmon Motors, May Department Stores, American and Foreign Power and Wright Aeronautical.

German Bank Rate Likely to Stand

Pillsbury Flour.

Pillsbury flour in the May break sold off about 25 points from its high of the year, but in recent weeks has recovered about 10 points. The early selling was due to reports that the company suffered as a result of the drop in wheat to 96 cents a bushel. Since then wheat has recovered a maximum of something like 50 cents a bushel. Pillsbury directors evidently feel the company is better off than it has been in a long time past. If they thought otherwise they would not have declared an extra dividend of 50 cents.

American and Foreign Power.

It is generally believed in reliable quarters that common dividends are not far away for holders of American and Foreign Power, and action is expected before the end of this year. Such action would be construed as unusually optimistic, for even if the cash return were only moderate, it is likely that the street would interpret dividend inauguration as a definite indication that the years of development in South America and elsewhere had begun to show gratifying results.

Anaconda.

During periods when the coppers have been less in favor Anaconda has reacted with the others. Trade interests have pointed out that Anaconda has a well diversified earning power and would not be affected by adverse metal trade conditions as drastically as many other concerns which are only outright copper producers. The company is an active manufacturer of products consuming copper and other metals and derives a substantial income from this branch of its business.

Outside Insiders.

According to an officer of an industrial company there are times when insiders are not insiders. "From time to time," said the banker, "there were reports that the company I represent would merge with another company. I continued to deny the reports until one day a leading banker informed me that a certain group had been buying the stock of my company and proposed to merge it with another company."

Paramount.

That Paramount-Famous Players will maintain its dominant position in the amusement field is demonstrated by the continued absorption of additional theater chains. This has been responsible for some buying of the stock from important quarters. Predictions are heard that the company will have earnings equal to approximately $7 a share this year, which would mean that the stock is selling out of line with many others.

Consolidated Gas.

When Consolidated Gas was selling around $100 a share, the bulls said it was going to $150 a share. It got there in a few months. They now say it is going to $200 a share, and it may get there if it has the same luck as bulls who predicted certain levels for General Electric, Can, Allied Chemical and other blue chip stocks. Of course, the advance in Consolidated Gas centers around the rumor that it is to become the parent company of a gigantic gas and power merger.

Listings and Market Values.

For every $100 of new securities publicly offered in the United States in the last four years, there was a gain of more than $150 in the market value of all securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange, according to a survey by Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc.

Bendix.

While there is a wide difference of opinion regarding aviation shares it is noted that most observers consider Bendix as offering good speculative possibilities. There has been much professional activity in the stock in recent sessions and during advances an outside following has been attracted. Meanwhile those who are bearish have been selling and the result has been quite a good sized short interest in the issue.

American Sugar.

Officials of American Sugar are reported to be considering a program for the manufacture of alcohol, as a further diversification for the company's activities. With blackstrap molasses for raw material American Sugar would not be compelled to go far outside its own field for its supply.

Continental Plane Motor Passes Test

DETROIT, Aug. 10.—Continental Motors Corporation's new seven-cylinder radial airplane motor was successfully tested with the return today of a Continental powered Stinson, Jr., plane from the initial long distance trial flight. Investment Trust Is Offering Rights

CITIES SERVICE GETS WELL

TULSA, Aug. 10.—Indian Territory Illuminating Oil Company, subsidiary of Cities Service Company, brought in twelfth well completed in Oklahoma City pool which produced 140 barrels in first hour or 3,360 barrels daily. Well, which is No. 1 Bodine in section 11-30-2W, blew in while Ement was being drilled out at 4,474 feet. Well is expected to increase its output after deepening. Sinclair Pipe Line Company, owned jointly by Standard Oil Company of Indiana and Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation, is making a survey for a pipe line to Oklahoma City pool from its main line in Seminole area. This will give Oklahoma City pool five lines including one now being surveyed by Sinclair.

QUIET SESSION ON LOCAL MARKET

Propeller Has Fractional Gain On Merger Announcement; Firm Tendency in Main List

A quiet week-end trading session took place on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, with quotations holding steady and volume of business showing no marked change from the previous day's average.

Announcement of the United Aircraft-Standard Steel Propeller merger brought no material change in the quotations on the latter company's shares. On the opening here, the stock sold at 49 as against last night's close at 48½. In New York, the stock sold above 49. United Aircraft was strong and moved up a level representing a price above 50 on Standard Steel Propeller.

The local fuels continued to work in a narrow range. Prices held within a point or so of yesterday's finals, with a slight firming tendency noted.

In the miscellaneous manufacturing division there were no noticeable changes. A fractional improvement was noted in Blaw Knox and Pittsburgh Screw and Bolt, but transactions in these issues were in small volume.

By B. C. FORBES

MANY people and many things have contributed to make America great. Nobody has contributed more than America's capable workers.

We delight to honor all kinds of people; but how often is adequate honor done to workmen deserving honor?

GEORGE B. CORTELYOU, president of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York, has just prepared a unique little volume, with the simple title, "John O'Connell." It is devoted entirely to a sketch of John O'Connell's career, and a reproduction of a commemorative tablet which reads:

"In recognition of the unprecedented continuous service of 72 years at this plant of John O'Connell, general foreman, who died on July 13, 1928, the Twenty-first Street Plant of the Consolidated Gas Company was by order of the executive committee on Tuesday, March 5, 1929, designated as the O'CONNELL PLANT."

HOW many workers not above the rank of foreman have had a big plant named after them?

In unveiling this tablet, President Cortelyou said:

"In affixing this commemorative tablet to the walls of the Twenty-first Street Plant—now known as the O'Connell Plant—we are but giving effect to what was already an established fact; for whether so officially designated or not, this plant would always be associated with the name of John O'Connell.

"We cannot think of one without the other. His long life was spent here. Beginning as a lad of 17, he worked here for nearly three-quarters of a century, doing his duty well and faithfully all that time, and making a record of continuous active service that is unprecedented. All of his interests were centered in this neighborhood. Near here is the church in which he worshipped, and it is in this section that he spent so many of his spare hours in visiting and helping the poor, the sick and the needy. In his life, both inside and outside the plant, he exemplified those virtues which ennobled the individual and exalt the nation.

"Though he is gone from us, his character and example remain as an inspiration to those who follow after. We are proud to belong to an industry that produces such men as John O'Connell."

IT may be complained that John had to wait until he was dead before his services were recognized. He didn't. Three years ago his company tendered him an anniversary dinner, "on the occasion of his completion of three-score-and-ten years of continuous employment." That function was graced by the attendance of many notables in the Consolidated Gas Company, from President Cortelyou down, as well as by a number of prominent citizens in various walks of life, some of them familiar with John O'Connell's daily benefactions conducted over a period of more than half a century.

THESE bits from the life-story of John O'Connell reveal that a man does not have to possess riches to become a genuine philanthropist and that even the longest of working hours need not prevent one from finding the time to do good if his heart beat warmly:

"For many years he lived in a house owned by the company and located at the works, where he was on call at all hours of the day and night. Aside from his home, family and church ties, his life was centered in the works, and to it he gave unreservedly the best that was in him. He never took a vacation or a Sunday off, and up to the time of his final illness he scarcely knew what it was to be sick. He seldom went out of the neighborhood, and then only for a few hours at a time.

"At a meeting of the directors on April 20, 1880, the president was directed to present to John O'Connell the sum of $50 as a token of their appreciation of his services on the occasion of the fire in the scrubber house.

"For more than 70 years he never missed 6 o'clock Sunday morning mass. He held various offices in St. Vincent De Paul Society and was active in charitable work, spending most of the hours between supper and bedtime in visiting and relieving the sick and needy of the parish. He was a generous contributor to all the objects of the church and was a donor of several memorials. Practically every moment of his waking hours was filled with useful work.

"Thus, within the sphere which he marked out for himself, John O'Connell achieved a success and a distinction that will be remembered and cherished as long as the industry that he loved so well and served so faithfully endures."

MAY the telling of this story inspire other employers to pause and consider whether they have not in their employ some man or men justly entitled to more than ordinary recognition.

B. C. Forbes has gone on vacation. His column will reappear after Labor Day.

FORD TURNOUT AT PEAK

DETROIT, Aug. 10.—World production of Ford automobiles and trucks for July was the largest for that month in the history of the Ford Motor Company, according to announcement today. All records for retail deliveries to customers also were broken.

The company also announced that requirements for cars during August is placed at considerably more than 200,000 and that every effort will be made to meet this demand.

Production of Ford cars and trucks in the United States during July totaled 180,804, and for the rest of the world, 15,701, making a grand total of 196,505. Retail deliveries to customers in the United States alone totaled 170,676 for the month. This was more than a third of the total car and truck business of the United States.

While production curve of the Ford plant at River Rouge has been maintained at fairly steady volume the year round, July always has been the low point in the curve. In the striking increase in volume over the same months in previous years, and 150,000 unfilled orders on the books of Ford dealer organizations, Ford officials foresee one of the busiest autumns in the history of the company.

Federal Water Co. Reports Revenues

Federal Water Service Corporation, which is controlled by Tri-Utilities Corporation, reports that consolidated gross revenues, including other income, of constituent properties amount to $16,033,953 for the year ended June 30, 1929, as compared with $14,058,954 for the preceding 12 months, an increase of $1,975,000, or over 14 per cent. Operating expenses, maintenance and depreciation as provided in subsidiary companies' mortgages, and taxes other than federal income tax, totaled $7,148,672, as against $6,613,163. Gross corporate income of $8,885,282 showed an increase of $1,439,491, or 19.33 per cent.

Campbell Wyant Foundry Earnings

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Earnings of Campbell, Wyant and Cannon Foundry Company for the first six months of 1929 will slightly exceed $3 per share on 315,000 no par capital shares outstanding after all charges and federal tax, it is estimated. This compares with similar earnings for the first half of 1928 equivalent to $4.30 a share on the smaller capitalization of 209,898 capital shares then outstanding. The company's volume of business in July was 26 per cent greater than that of July, 1928, substantially filling a large amount of new manufacturing capacity which the company built early this year.

Stock Exchange Topics

Wall Street Not Much Interested in Steel Statement.

THE monthly statement of the Steel Corporation showing its unfilled tonnage bookings as of the close of July was due to be published at noon. But Wall street, which had been rather interested in the forthcoming figures earlier in the week, was not inclined to give much attention to them as time for their appearance approached. The statement was expected to show a decrease ranging from 100,000 tons to 150,000 tons. This would be the third consecutive drop reported by the corporation into backlog of orders, yet even if the maximum decline were reported, the total of business on the books for future delivery would stand substantially above that recorded at the close of July last year.

Brokers are strong in their opinion that if new issues continue to come to the board at the rate they are arriving, there is nothing to prevent brokers' loans from normally expanding. So many businesses are passing from private hands into those of the public in the shape of share offerings that banking requirements to handle these shares in the market must of a necessity expand, too.

STRONG buying support came into the pivotal stocks as trading began this morning at New York. Such buying had been anticipated in view of the fact that the market had showed only feeble recuperative powers in the course of yesterday's downswing. Support buying was effective in keeping prices moderately above last night's final levels, thus holding in check any necessitous selling for marginal accounts which might have developed had stocks suffered a further decline at the outset. Steel common, American Can, General Electric, American Telephone and Telegraph, Westinghouse Electric, New York Central and Bethlehem Steel responded to demand which, by its aggressiveness, lifted those stocks and influenced a better tone in the general list.

Selling which carried stocks off so sharply on Friday was comprised largely of liquidation for the account of nervous traders who interpreted the rise in the New York rediscount rate as likely to prove a bearish influence for the immediate future at least. Undoubtedly there was plenty of selling for speculative account, prompted by the same belief, but the absence of any semblance of vigorous rally in closing dealings was indicative of the fact that selling represented largely the letting go of long holdings. Such liquidation naturally afforded shorts an opportunity to cover where desired without bidding against each other for their needs. Had selling been predominantly for short account a strong rally would very likely have marked final dealings.

AS usual, following a break such as that experienced yesterday, margin clerks worked well into the night bringing customers' accounts up to date, and dispatching calls for additional funds where the occasion required it. Calling for more margin was rather heavy, but the action of the market indicated that the response had been satisfactory, and that in such instances where additional marginal funds requested were not forthcoming, delinquents received something of a respite from the improved tone of the market during today's short session.

So far as the money market is concerned, the raising of the rediscount rate to the 6 per cent level is not expected to have any far-reaching effect immediately, because of the fact that the open market has for a long time been established on a basis in keeping with the higher official rate. The stock market, however, is expected by experienced observers to go through a period of readjustment to new conditions. How far this readjustment will go and what its character will be are still more or less problematical at the moment. But it is generally recognized that presently the speculative interest in the market is the greatest in history. It may be well to bear in mind, however, the fact that the stock market, like the open money market, has been operating on the basis of the higher discount rate just put into force. Brokers, since early last fall, have been paying an average of 8 to 11 per cent for their money, and traders naturally have been footing the bill.

RESERVE BOARD PUTS CURB ON SPECULATION

Rise in Rediscount Rate Laid to Increase Shown in Amount of Brokers' Loans

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Federal Reserve Board has decided not to throw up the sponge in the tussle with Wall Street bulls.

That is the meaning of the rise in the rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York from 5 to 6 per cent. At last, after months of ominous delay, the central board of strategy at the capital has yielded to the judgment of the regional bank in New York at the money center.

The increase means that within the Federal Reserve Board the minority of one, originally consisting of Edmund Platt, of Poughkeepsie, has at length become the majority. For months, Mr. Platt has unreservedly advocated raising the rediscount rate a full per cent in order to discourage the increase in brokers' loans. But until this week he was outvoted by his colleagues. Charles S. Hamlin, it is understood, was on the fence for some time, regarding the alternative practice of direct action as a pure experiment.

For many weeks the Street had rumors each Thursday that there would be an increase in the rediscount rate, but day before yesterday the Street heard singularly few of such rumors. The speculative amateur was caught wholly unprepared.

LOANS AT NEW PEAK

The immediate cause of the rate increase was unquestionably the steady rise of brokers' loans in recent weeks to unprecedented heights. Brokers' loans are now some $360,000,000 higher than they were when strong warnings were issued by the Federal Reserve Board last February. They now stand $227,000,000 higher than on March 20, which was the peak for all time until recent weeks.

Superficial traders may regard the maneuver as a radically new element in the financial situation, but in reality the rate increase is merely a belated official recognition of credit conditions long existing.

The rate rise imposed fresh hardships on London and other financial money centers, which have been drained of liquid funds by the magnet of high interest rates in New York. However, it should be borne in mind that it is the open market rate on acceptances and the call money rate, rather than the rediscount rate, which pulls funds here. The rediscount rate, which has been out of line for months, has at least been brought in line.

DISCIPLINE SPECULATORS

In raising the rate first at New York instead of elsewhere, as has been frequently done in the past, the Federal Reserve Board left no doubt of its intention to discipline speculators.

The recovery in grain prices and the marked upswing in stock prices since the late spring paved the way for the Federal Reserve policy. If wheat had continued in the doldrums, there would doubtless have been great reluctance to do anything that might even remotely embarrass farmers at the approach of the harvesting and crop moving season. As it is it took courage for the Federal Reserve to act at this time.

It doubtless feared that the stock market would run wild if the reserve system pumped an additional $300,000,000 of reserve credit into the money market, as it did last year, beginning at this season, unless it counteracted such an influence by marking up that rate.

The higher rate also gives member banks an excuse for tightening up on collateral loans to their own customers.

VALIDITY CHALLENGED

Fundamentally, the reserve rate increase serves only to advertise conditions already existent. In July the carrying charge in the average brokerage office was about 10 per cent. It is unlikely to be substantially higher during August, in spite of the change in the rediscount rate. Moreover, as has been pointed out repeatedly in this column in recent weeks, the validity of the bull movement has been challenged by the soaring of brokers' loans to unprecedented peaks.

Since the federal reserve started to discipline the stock market in November 1927, it has repeatedly shown a capacity to affect the market over short periods. But over longer spells fundamental conditions operate. The application of this observation to the present situation is that the over-extended trader may be in peril, but that the long term investor need only consider the intrinsic value of a security, as measured by known assets, established earning power, and prospects.

Until the market establishes a new equilibrium, there is no incentive to bull stocks indiscriminately from these levels.

ABSENCE OF INFLATION

The saving grace about the technical situation is that the rise since May has been in selected stocks of the best grade. Much of the buying has been institutional in character, indicating that stocks are in reasonably strong hands. Stocks, however, which have been arbitrarily whirled up irrespective of price-earnings ratio are of course in the weakest position, as the recent collapse in Chicago indicated.

In spite of the extraordinary volume of business activity and profits thus far this year, there has been an absence of inflation, and as far as can be ascertained, little dangerous piling up of inventories.

Business sentiment is so strongly optimistic that the federal reserve doubtless felt that it could again attempt to hold the stock market in check without throwing a damper on business prosperity.

REGAINS YACHT HELD BY U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(INS.)—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon ordered the release from federal custody of the yacht Margo, seized at Detroit for violation of the customs laws, on the payment of $30,000 penalty by the owner, Bert A. Massee, of Chicago.

The yacht was chartered to Louis Mendelssohn, of Detroit. On seizure at Detroit July 27 a large quantity of liquor was found on board, according to Treasury officials.

Owing to the fact Massee had no connection with the case the craft was released on the payment of penalty.

John D. Presents Dimes, Ford Watches

LAPEER, Mich., Aug. 10.—(AP.)—Where John D. Rockefeller doles out dimes Henry Ford now gives away gold watches.

Ford purchased an old lumbering industry machine shop here to be moved to his museum of early American history at Dearborn. While he was talking with the owners three small boys entered with a hatchet which they wished sharpened.

"What's your name?" Mr. Ford asked the youngest.

"Billy Bob Kahler," the boy replied, and added his age, 5 years.

Smiling, Mr. Ford pulled an expensive gold watch from his pocket and handed it to the boy. Billy's companions looked as they felt.

"I only carry one watch at a time," Ford told them, "but I have lots more at Dearborn."

LESS CURRENCY CIRCULATING RECENTLY

Increased Payments by Check Factor in Trend Noted In Business Since War

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—During the past few years there has been a decline in the total amount of currency in circulation in the United States, which is the more remarkable since it has been a period when business was generally active and production in several lines exceeded all previous high marks.

While this appears to be unusual and contradictory, an analysis of previous years shows that for some time a continuous economy in the use of currency has been going on in this country.

After allowing for the trend of business growth and for changes in the price level, the use of currency has been declining almost continuously for at least 45 years, according to the New York Federal Reserve Bank. During the greater part of this period, the bank finds, the tendency to use less currency has been obscured by the increase in the population and business activity of this country, or by a rise in the general level of prices, or both, with a consequent increase in the total currency requirements, and it has only been within recent years that the tendency has become plainly apparent.

CURRENCY AND PRICES

The effects of changes in the general price level on currency circulation are strikingly shown during the late war and the post-war recession. In fact, the increase in currency circulation from 1917 to 1920 appears to have slightly exceeded the rise in the price level and the growth of trade, so that there was a temporary rise in the adjusted currency figures.

This may have been due to the fact that a considerable amount of currency, although nominally in circulation in the United States, actually was taken out of the country during the war and immediately following, and did not return rapidly until the period of depreciation of European currencies had largely ended.

The renewed decline since those years, however, appears to be in line with tendencies which were operative for a considerable period prior to the war toward an increased use of checks for payrolls and other transactions, and reductions in the amounts of currency carried or hoarded, the bank states.

INFLOW OF GOLD

During July there was a further inflow of a moderate amount of gold, which represented a continuation of the movements from England and Argentina, reported in June. Receipts from London totaled approximately $10,000,000 in the first half of the month, but as sterling exchange became somewhat firmer in July, no further shipments were reported. Imports from Argentina amounted to nearly $21,000,000 in July and additional sales of gold in Buenos Aires for shipment to New York were reported during the month.

These imports were partly offset by the ear-marking of $20,000,000 of gold at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York for foreign account, and exports of less than $1,000,000, so that the net gain to the monetary gold stock of this country through these transactions was approximately $10,000,000 in July, which was the smallest net gain for any month since January.

JULY MOVEMENTS

July imports brought the total receipts of gold from England to over $48,000,000, and the total from Argentina to about $51,000,000 during the first seven months of the year. In addition to these movements there were substantial shipments from Germany and also from Canada earlier in the year, but these imports have been partly offset by a net increase of about $20,000,000 in the amount of gold held under earmark; so that the total gain of gold through net import and earmarking transactions since the first of the year has amounted to about $184,000,000.

LOWER TARIFF FOR AUTOS SOUGHT

Leading Manufacturers See Reduction as Aid Toward Increased Foreign Trade

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Leading automobile manufacturers interested in expanding their business in foreign countries believe that the proposed reduction in the American tariff, and particularly abolition of present countervailing clause, will aid their plans in developing foreign markets.

Agreement of Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee to reduce the existing tariff on imports of passenger vehicles and light trucks is in line with recommendations made by manufacturers at recent hearings on the tariff.

The committee proposes to reduce the rate from the present 25 per cent to 10 per cent and beyond this to abolish countervailing clause. Some manufacturers have recommended that the tariff be abolished entirely, as it has long since outlived its usefulness as a protective measure for an industry which needs no protection along these lines.

WANT LOWER TARIFF

National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, which represents a majority of American automobile producers, however, recommended a reduction in the present tariff on imported cars from 25 per cent to 10 per cent and retention of the countervailing clause. This means that the United States' duty on imports shall be equal to the duty levied by foreign countries against American cars provided it is not less than 25 per cent. In other words, a country levying a duty against American cars amounting to 45 per cent under the present tariff has an import barrier against its shipments to the United States of 45 per cent. If it reduces its tariff to 25 per cent, the American tariff, under the countervailing clause, will be 25 per cent, but if it reduces its tariff below 25 per cent, the American duty would still be 25 per cent.

INDUSTRY SAFE

Leading manufacturers are satisfied that proposed changes in the tariff are a step in the right direction. However, in view of the fact that about 600,000 cars of American manufacture, including cars produced by American factories in Canada, are being exported annually and only 500 to 600 cars are imported from other countries, it may be assumed the industry does not need any protection at all and that the tariff on imported cars might just as well be eliminated irrespective of foreign imposts against American cars.

Under such a basis, some foreign cars would come in, as they do at present, simply because of difference in style features. But there does not seem to be any conceivable possibility of an invasion of the United States market by foreign-made cars if the duty were lifted entirely. Nor would it have any adverse influence on employment in the industry or consumption of American-produced material. Foreign manufacturers are still far behind American factories in production methods.

MILLS KEEP UP SCHEDULES

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 10.—Operations in Shenango Valley mills continued around 90 per cent during the past week. Carnegie Steel is operating in full, with the exception of one blast furnace being down. American Steel and Wire is continuing at around 85 per cent schedule.

Thirty hot mills are working at the Mercer works and 12 mills at the Farrell works of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company plant.

Sharon Steel Hoop is on full. One open hearth was recently closed for repairs, but will be back in operation on August 12. This company, which made a wonderful showing during the first six months, continues to operate at full speed into the last half of the year.

No changes are reported at the Natnonal Malleable and Steel Castings Company plant, as well as in other mills of the valley.

Big Plane Brings Party to Oil City

OIL CITY, Pa., Aug. 10.—Carrying 12 passengers, a Ford tri-motor all-metal plane, flew from Youngstown to Oil City in 40 minutes, and landed at Oil City's airport on the Dempseytown road, yesterday afternoon. Haldeman Plans Endurance Flight

WHEELING, W. Va., Aug. 10.—Capt. George Haldeman, who two years ago piloted the plane that carried Ruth Elder almost to Europe, is not going to make a hop to Europe, according to a statement made by him when here a few days ago.

Instead, he is to pilot a Bellanca mystery monoplane on a new world's endurance test for non-refueling planes. The new plane, it is said, has a lifting power that far surpasses anything yet under flight.

Mexico City Site Of Airplane Factory

A new airplane factory in Mexico City is being installed near Valbuena, the central airport of Mexico.

The machinery was to be installed late in July and both Mexican and American mechanics were to be employed, reports Commercial Attache George Wythe, Mexico City, to the Department of Commerce. Many of the employes from the Tijuana factory were to be moved to the plant. The founder of the Tijuana factory, who was the governor of the northern district of lower California, is reported to be the principal stockholders in the new company, which will build both military and naval planes. It is not known whether the Tijuana factory will be dismantled. The new plant is expected immediately to turn out three planes a week for the Government which will maintain its national shops directly under the Army Air Service for the repair of military planes.

SCOUTS ENJOY EXCURSIONS

Eagle Scout Clark B. Johnston, of Crafton, who has received many honors as an ideal Scout, is reporting details of the International jamboree at Birkenhead, England, for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. His cabled news reports are being published exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

By CLARK B. JOHNSTON,
Eagle Scout.
Correspondent, Sun-Telegraph.

BIRKENHEAD, England, Aug. 10.—Excursions are breaking the monotony of camp life, and providing a welcome diversion for the Bulldog Patrol. For three days we have been jaunting around England.

William Braden and Charles Throckmorton went to Blackburn as the guest of a friend they had met in the United States. They expect to stay a few days.

The great cavern at Castleton was the destination of most of the camp yesterday. A scout guided us through. Peaks Castle, built about 900 A. D., was also visited. Most of these old castles are in ruins, but they are interesting to visit.

Tea was served in the villages through the courtesy of the Scouts of those districts.

On the way home the bus driver became lost and rode many miles out of his way. This enabled us to see more English towns and country.

Boy Scouts who are interested—and all of the thousands in Western Pennsylvania are interested—in this biggest event in the history of Scoutdom will find exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph news written for them by one of their own Scouts. Scout Johnston will feature the news which he as a Scout knows will be of special interest to Scouts here. Watch the Sun-Telegraph for his articles.

Identify Victim Killed by Train

ORDERS BOOST LOCOMOTIVE BUSINESS

Unfilled Requirements Reach Peak of Year Despite Recent Large Shipments

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Despite mounting total of locomotive shipments in recent months, principal locomotive manufacturers in this country at the end of July had a heavier backlog of unfilled orders than at any time previous this year. Incoming business, therefore, has been at a greater rate than deliveries so far, and earnings of principal builders in next few months should show increase.

Locomotive shipments this year are in marked contrast with 1928. Trend in that year was steadily downward, whereas this year shops have been turning locomotives out in greater number. July shipments were off somewhat from preceding months, but in view of the heavier backlog of unfilled orders, deliveries probably will be increased during August and succeeding months.

POOR FIRST QUARTER

In connection with earnings of locomotive builders, it is important to observe that domestic deliveries in first three months of this year were considerably below any similar period in 1928. This means that first quarter earnings of locomotive builders this year probably were the poorest on record, for 1928 generally is regarded as the poorest buying year builders have experienced.

That first quarter 1929 earnings should be the poorest on record may be considered surprising, in view of the increase in buying which started late in 1928. But because of the time required in manufacture of a locomotive, shipments, and consequently earnings, of companies in this line are rather slow to reflect a buying trend. Shipments of only 57 domestic locomotives in the first quarter of this year reflect the fact that bookings in November, 1928, were at their low point, totaling only 104 engines. Second quarter shipments of 189 domestic locomotives reflect increase in bookings in December, 1928, to 238.

LOCOMOTIVE EARNINGS

The significance of this can be best illustrated by study of American Locomotive Company earnings for the first half of this year. The company reported net profit of $3,075,939 which, after preferred dividends, left a balance of $2.24 a share for the common stock. In the first half of 1928, company earned only $1,502,702, or 20 cents a common share. Yet, judging by the figures on shipments, the first quarter of this year probably was the worst in American Locomotive's history and profits, therefore, were made largely in the second quarter.

New orders for locomotives in July declined from the rate of preceding months, but equipment makers are hopeful that demonstrated economies of new locomotives placed in service recently will induce railroads to discard antiquated engines that have been in operation, in many cases, more than 30 years.

Tear Up Wedding Certificate; 'Divorced'

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Aug. 10.—A short cut to divorce for Isaac Tressler, of Coolspring, was to tear up his marriage license and then, according to charges brought against him, marry another woman. A charge of bigamy has been preferred by the woman who claims she is wife No. 2. Tressler failed to furnish $500 bond and was jailed.

It is charged Tressler and his first wife lived together for a short time and then decided to grant themselves a divorce by destroying the marriage license. Four years later Tressler married wife No. 2.

Tressler told Alderman Robert Collins that he did not know that he was married to the first woman.

"No preacher or justice of the peace ever married us," Tressler is quoted as saying. "We had a license from the Court House, but I don't think they married us up there."

Raw Rubber Rise To Boom Tire Prices

CLEVELAND, Aug. 10.—William O'Neil, president of General Tire and Rubber Company, said prices of tires will be revised upward within a year, according to an Akron dispatch.

Mr. O'Neil said: "Tire prices are the lowest they have ever been. They are based on low contracts for cheap cotton and on the low average cost of rubber. The lifting of the British restriction act brought rubber to a very low level. Consumption of crude rubber is catching up to capacity crude rubber production, and certainly within a year tire prices will be higher because of higher crude prices."

RETAIL TRADE HOLDS UP

The R. G. Dun & Company's Weekly Trade Review in this week's issue says regarding conditions in the Pittsburgh district: There has been little change in the general business situation during the past week, with retail trade in moderate volume, although apparently averaging slightly better than a year ago. Jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel, shoes and furnishing goods report sales light, although fall buying is beginning to materialize to a slight extent. Sales of department stores are being stimulated by clearance sales of summer merchandise and by sales of furniture and furs at special reductions, and business with the larger stores is reported averaging slightly higher than a year ago. There is no particular activity in groceries and provisions and confectionery lines are also seasonably quiet.

Industrial operations continue at a higher rate than usual for this period of the year, although reductions are reported in some lines and orders are not coming in quite so freely, although optimism continues to be the rule with steel producers. Production of plate glass continues above the seasonable average with the demand unusually heavy. The window glass situation shows slight improvement, with orders coming in a little more freely. Manufacturers of electrical and radio equipment report business holding up very well, and dealers report sales averaging considerably better than a year ago. Production of crude oil broke all records last week and prices have been showing a downward tendency, with the leading grades of Pennsylvania. Crude now quoted at 50 cents per barrel lower than they were early in the year.

Production of bituminous coal during July was about 5 per cent greater than a year ago, and demand seems to be slightly better. Prices of Western Pennsylvania, grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted, per net ton as follows:-Steam coal $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal $1.55 to $1.75; steam slack 80 cents to 90 cents and gas slack $1.00 to $1.10.

WAYS STUDIED TO MARKET COTTON

Co-operatives Prepare Plan To Interest Growers in Benefits of New System

DALLAS, Aug. 10.—Headquarters of the American Cotton Growers Exchange announce that a comprehensive plan to obtain further co-operative marketing for southern cotton will be prepared for submission to the Federal Farm Board.

C. O. Moser, president of the exchange and chairman of the American Institute of Co-Operation, which recently met for two weeks at Baton Rouge to consider co-operative marketing in the light of the new Federal Agricultural Marketing Act, is organizing a committee of representatives of the cotton co-operatives to present the plan to the Federal Farm Board in Washington.

At Baton Rouge the cotton co-operative leaders met with three members of the board, Alexander Legge, chairman; C. C. Teague and Carl Williams. The board members were impressed favorably with the tentative plan to market a larger volume of American cotton co-operatively this year.

WEAK SPOT IN SYSTEM

In a preliminary discussion before the American Institute of Co-Operation, attended by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and the three members of the board, it was pointed out that the weak spot in the present co-operative structure, as far as cotton is concerned, is inability of many cotton growers to deliver cotton to the co-operatives, due to existing production credit practices.

A. H. Stone, vice president of the Staple Cotton Co-Operative Association, handling the Mississippi delta cotton crop, showed that the 14 American cotton co-operative marketing associations affiliated with the American Cotton Growers' Exchange in 1928, handled only about 8 per cent of the total American cotton crop. He attributed lack of greater volume to inability of farmers to obtain sufficient crop production credit from the co-operatives.

CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT

Representatives of the Alabama Cotton Co-operative Association said that in Alabama only about 12 per cent of the cotton growers were free agents and that 80 per cent made use of existing credit facilities in the form of chattel and crop mortgages extended by country banks and credit merchants. Since production credit is often at rather high rates of interest, co-operatives may plan to obtain sufficient funds to lend to grower members at lower rates. It is believed this would bring farmers in large numbers into the marketing associations.

Eight years ago when a wave of co-operative marketing organization spread through the South, resulting in establishing cotton co-operatives in practically every cotton raising state, the matter of crop production credit was overlooked.

Mr. Stone believes co-operatives could gain control of the cotton if they were in position to extend production credit to grower members in sufficient volume. This would give them command of the commodity, he asserts.

Vets' Picnic to Be Held At Kennywood Aug. 31

The annual grand reunion of American war veterans will be held at Kennywood Park, Saturday, August 31, under the auspices of the Sun-Telegraph and the Kennywood Park management.

Like last year's outing and those of preceding years, it will be a glorious get-together for all the boys and their families. Old times will be talked over and old friends and acquaintances will meet again. And every vet in and around Pittsburgh has "orders" to be present.

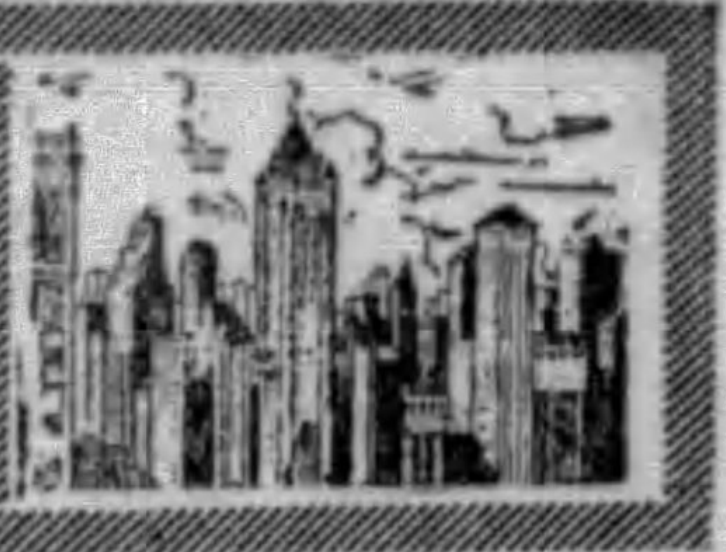
The Allegheny Chapter, American Red Cross, members of the Salvation Army who served overseas, Knights of Columbus workers and members of other patriotic organizations who served with the A. E. F. are invited.

Wounded war veterans now confined in hospitals in the Pittsburgh area will be special guests of the Sun-Telegraph. They will be escorted from the hospitals to the park and return by automobile and everything will be done for their comfort and pleasure while attending the reunion.

It's going to be a grand and glorious day. Those who attended last year will be sure to be there. And those who were unable to attend are urged to do so this year.

Gates to the park will be thrown open to those who served under their country's flag in any war. Make your plans right now so that August 31 is reserved for the big day.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS



RAILROAD LIENS STILL HELD BY U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—(AP.)—Dull days in the bond markets have left the government with a non-moving stock of lien securities on its hands, as they are understood to have left some of the great investment houses.

What the government holds is about $62,000,000 in railroad issues, left over from the war time control over the carriers and the period after the war when weaker lines borrowed from the treasury for the reason that they couldn't borrow anywhere else.

At the height of its railroad finance operations the government was the creditor of roads to a total of more than $900,000,000, and the record shows that it came well out of its investment. Most of the collateral was passed to the investing public in the hey-day of the bond market, back in 1927, without profit as such, but with good interest earnings for the period the government had funds tied up in transportation.

RAILROADS LISTED

A check of the situation shows that the small balance of securities still remains in the treasury because officials have found that some of them can't be sold at all, while the rest can't be sold to advantage while the public preference is for stocks over bonds. The biggest single debtor left is the Boston & Maine, whose obligations are in government hands to a total of $19,386,000. The Seaboard Air Line, a carrier which has had to contend with things like the collapse of the Florida Real Estate boom and the fruit fly, owes $14,000,000. The Chicago & Western Indiana owes $6,800,000, while the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, after a receivership, got the government to take $3,000,000 in stock.

The rest of the government's security list includes evidences of small loans to small lines, some of which are admittedly in doubtful or desperate shape. In the main, however, the batch as a whole represents equities which will be combed over some day and turned into cash when money and investment markets regain their taste for such things. Right now, the government is earning 6 per cent on most of the list.

Baldwin Delivers New Type Engines

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The latest locomotive deliveries made by the Baldwin Locomotive Works to the International Railways of Central America are designed to burn oil fuel on account of the relatively high cost of imported fuel. The two most recent deliveries were of Mikado type engines weighing about 70 tons each and incorporating all the most important developments in locomotive construction. A feature is the Caprotti Poppert valve gear, recently introduced into the United States, which are especially desirable in regions like Central America where economies of water and fuel are so important.

The equipment of International Railways of Central America now includes more than 100 locomotives, about 200 passenger cars and 2,000 freight cars.

AFRICA COPPER AT PEAK

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Important points brought out at annual meeting of Tanganyika Concessions, Ltd., the British company which owns nearly 30 per cent of Union Miniere du Haut-Katanga's capital and dividend shares, and which also financed the construction of the Benguela Railway, included a statement that Union Miniere now has in sight a copper production of 200,000 tons (440,920,000 pounds) yearly.

Such an output, it was declared, has been the objective of recent plant expansion. It is thus indicated that 200,000 tons is to be the production of the company's eastern mines, as there has been no plant construction yet at the western mines.

Equipment of the western mines is to be started as soon as they are reached by the railway, and this should be not later than next summer.

In all probability it will be four years before the western mines are producing, but if they develop as well as expected they probably will be equipped for an output of at least 60,000 tons of copper yearly, giving Union Miniere a productive capacity of over 550,000,000 pounds of copper.

WINDOW GLASS TRADE MORE CHEERFUL

Inquiries More Plentiful and Present Bookings About Equal Output of Factories

There seems to be a more optimistic air prevailing among the manufacturers and jobbers of window glass concerning the outlook for the industry during the last third of the year than has been heretofore customary.

This state has been brought about by a number of contributing factors, says the National Glass Budget. To start with, there is less than 600,000 boxes of window glass being produced monthly. While jobbers' stocks were high at the beginning of the year, they are now believed to be quite a bit below seasonable average. Orders booked now by the producers are mostly for a single car of glass, but there is a sufficient number of them to make up a volume that is at least equal to factory output. Inquiries are becoming more plentiful and this fact would indicate that the trade will soon begin buying for the fall requirements.

For some months past, jobbers have been cleaning out their old stocks whenever possible, realizing that at least some of the manufacturers had sufficient stocks on hand to promptly fill any order that might be placed with them.

FIRMER TENDENCY NOTED

Authorities in the industry are looking forward to an average volume of business during the remainder of the year. A firmer tendency in the market is apparent in some directions.

Manufacturers of rough rolled and wired glass have good-sized stocks in their warehouses, and likewise the distributors. Competition is said to be rather keen in some localities. The volume of new business is fairly satisfactory. Demand is almost certain to increase owing to the number of large structures that will be glazed on the inside as well as the outside with rough and wired glass.

AUTO ORDERS SMALLER

The principal task before the manufacturers of polished plate glass is to keep abreast with demand. There has been a noticeable falling off in business coming from the automobile trade, but the mirror industry and the jobbing business both show increased activity.

There has been perhaps more attention paid to improving the quality of laminated glass than any other kind offered for sale. That there will be an increasing amount of glass of this character required for the automobile industry, banks and in other structures where safety is a factor, is a foregone conclusion. At this time there is quite a number of experiments under way and from reports the impression is gained that some new kinds are soon to be placed on the market.

BOTTLE PLANTS ACTIVE

The glass bottle business during the week continued to run true to form. Manufacturers and distributors of prescription ware and the wider-mouth line of ketchup bottles are finding the demand unusually strong. Bottle plants devoted to the manufacture of these lines of ware are busy and distributors of it are finding a ready market for large quantities of the product.

On of the very encouraging features of the bottle business, in this section, at least, is the continued evidence of a more settled price situation.

FLINT GLASS TRADE

Summer months in the flint glass industry are not expected to be paying ones. Vacations are taken and repairs have to be made, so manufacturers take advantage of these circumstances to put their plants in good shape for the fall fire. But only where the physical condition of the furnace or plant makes it obligatory, is there a complete cessation of operations, if business is good.

This has been a rather favorable year for persons in the flint glass industry from the standpoint of business also, and with the favorable weather conditions a greater product has been secured for which there has been a seasonal market. Reports are to the effect that repairs at some plants are already completed and everything "set" for the year's work, if not already started upon it.

In the distributing end of the industry business has been fairly good. The cool weather has slowed up the demand for beverage sets and what is considered summer glassware, but the loss there has been easily overcome by an increased activity in high-priced and odd pieces of ware.

Altogether the summer offers no discouraging flint glass picture to meet the gaze of either manufacturer or worker in the industry.

Propeller Co. Accepts Aircraft's Offer

DIRECTORS of the Standard Steel Propeller Corporation have accepted the offer of the United Aircraft & Transport Corporation to take over the propeller company through an exchange of stock. Holders of Standard Steel Propeller will receive one share of United Aircraft for each 2½ shares of Propeller. On conversion of present outstanding convertible preferred stock and exercise of outstanding warrants there will be 278,675 shares of Propeller common for which United Aircraft will exchange 111,470 shares of United stock. United Aircraft closed at 128¾ on the New York Stock Exchange last night while Propeller's last sale in the market here was at 48½.

The principal owners of the Standard Steel Propeller Corporation are the Hillman interests, Howard S. Evans, Thomas J. Ingram, Harry A. Kraeling, John M. Haverty and Samuel Diescher.

World's Largest Producers.

DEVELOPMENT of the Standard Steel Propeller Corporation has placed Pittsburgh in the front rank as an aeronautical accessory producer and the company has made rapid strides during the past two or three years. The company produces about 50 per cent of the world's aeronautical propeller output. Operations were started on a small scale in West Homestead a few years ago but expansion of the business necessitated the acquisition of larger quarters in Homestead. Recently the company's export business has shown a marked increase.

The newer Homestead plant was soon outgrown and this summer the corporation began an expansion program which will quadruple its capacity. It is understood operations will be continued there under the new regime.

Used On Famous Flights.

THE most brilliant feat in aviation's history, the flight of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to Paris two years ago, was accomplished in a plane equipped with one of the company's propellers.

Other major flights on which the local company's blades were used were: Art Goebel's winning Dole race to the Hawiian Islands; Capt. Frank M. Hawks' record dash from Los Angeles to New York in 18 hours and 21 minutes; J. H. Mears' and Capt. C. B. D. Collyer's Around-the-World trip, June 29 to July 22, 1928; Capt. G. H. Wilkins' non-stop flight over the North Pole, from Alaska to Spitzbergen, in April, 1928, and the Byrd and Wilkins Antarctic Expeditions.

Rounds Out Organization.

UNITED AIRCRAFT & TRANSPORT is the leading interest in the aeronautical industry, having been formed as a holding company to take over the Boeing Airplane Company; Pratt & Whitney, makers of the famous "Wasp" engine; various instrument manufacturers, and other business allied with aviation. The company was organized under the auspices of the National City Bank of New York. With the acquisiton of Standard Steel Propeller, it is now a fully rounded-out organization being equipped for manufacture of complete airships,, operation of air lines, passenger service and mail and freight transport.

Discount Raise Constructive.

THE action of the Federal Reserve authorities in raising the rediscount rate at New York was the "best thing that could happen to the market and will tend to lower call money rates," in the opinion of Robert G. Young, investment expert and manager of the National City Company's branch in this city. Threat of a higher rate had been hanging over the market for many months and the actual happening may be expected to clear a situation which has had the financial community at sixes and sevens all year.

It was natural that the element of surprise in the present instance should be followed by hasty selling of the character noted yesterday. But, more significant, was the powerful support which appeared to be underlying the pivotal issues such as Steel common, Anaconda, New York Central, American Can and stocks of like caliber. In the face of the rediscount rate advance it could hardly be conceded that the public would be the purchasers and the only other inference to be taken is that the strongest financial interests were buying the stocks.

Credit Prospects.

COMMENT from many banking sources indicate that those best equipped to judge the situation felt that the bank rate raise was a constructive development, practically all expressing sentiments similar to those of Mr. Young. The consensus of opinion is that the Reserve banks will increase their holdings of bankers' bills, or acceptances, releasing credit heretofore engaged in carrying this paper and permitting the individual institutions to finance the crop movement and fall trade expansion without difficulty.

Brokerage credit will tend to ease by reason of the fact that sources from which it has been supplied will feel more free to provide the funds knowing that their reserve supplies will not be needed in such large quantities for trade and agriculture.

Building Figures Below Year Ago

Building construction in the 15 largest cities totaled $139,798,097 in July, against $167,719,729 in July, 1928, a decrease of 17 per cent, according to S. W. Straus & Co. New York City showed a loss of 25 per cent and Chicago 51 per cent. Philadelphia showed an increase of 34 per cent. Boston 74 per cent, San Francisco 36 per cent, Washington 15 per cent, Cleveland 29 per cent, Milwaukee 81 per cent and Newark 23 per cent. Losses were shown in Detroit, St. Louis, Baltimore, Buffalo and Minneapolis.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—For the three months ended June 30, 1929, the Outboard Motors Corporation reports gross sales of $2,074,661 and net profits of $323,567. This period marks the first quarter operation for the new company which is a combination of the old Elto, Evinrude and Lockwood Outboard Motor Companies.

Date for Superior Stock Exchange Set

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—New no par stock of Superior Oil Corporation can be exchanged for old stock August 16 and thereafter. The basis of exchange is one share of new stock for each three shares of old.

July Cotton Cloths Output Decreases

Production of standard cotton cloths during July amounted to 234,439,000 yards, a decrease of more than 20 per cent from the June figures, the Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York announced today. Sales during July totaled 262,889,000 yards, equal to 112.1 per cent of production. Shipments amounted to 252,779,000 yards, or 107.8 per cent of production. Both sales and shipments were below production in July, 1928.

National Radiator Income $471,691

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—National Radiator Corporation reports for the year ended June 30, profit, before depreciation, of $471,691, and, after providing for depreciation, doubtful accounts, adjustment of inventory, miscellaneous times, and interest on debentures, a net loss of $1,280,847. The balance sheet as of June 30, showed total current assets of $6,891,570, as compared with current liabilities of $677,261.

Money Circulation In July Decreases

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Money in circulation in the United States on July 31 showed a decrease from the preceding month to a total of $4,717,242,524, against $4,746,296,567 on June 30, and $4,800,535,405 a year ago.

STEEL OUTPUT CONTINUES ACTIVE

Buying by Farm Machine Makers Increases While Auto Production Recedes

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Recent reports of a decrease in the rate of steel production are exaggerations and reports of a recession in steel buying are misleading. They arise either from a discounting of the observable facts or a desire to be first to "call the turn."

When steel production has always had a sharp seasonal recession it is natural enough to give undue weight to small points in looking for such recession, but if precedent is to be regarded at all it should be studied carefully, and the precedents show that the familiar seasonal recession has never ended later than July and July is now past. The violation of that seasonal precedent has gone into history. There is another seasonal precedent, of second half steel production being under first half, to which there have been only trifling exceptions That precedent is fully entitled to respect at the present time while furthermore there are actual evidences indicating a likelihood that it will be followed this year, by way of a five to 10 per cent decrease.

STEEL INGOT OUTPUT

The official reports of Bessemer and open-hearth steel ingot production show 5,273,167 tons for May, 4,881,370 tons for June and 4,838,093 tons for July. By the conventional computation, excluding Sundays and Independence Day, there was no decrease in daily rate from May to June and 4.7 per cent decrease from June to July, but in a case like this facts must be taken into the reckoning. Of late there has been much open-hearth production on Sundays and June had five of them, while Independenc Day made somewhat more than a 24-hour interruption. Taking account of these facts, there was fully four per cent decrease from May to June and not over about one per cent decrease from June to July. The divergence is important. The automobile industry would account for the June drop, which means that outside the automobile trade steel shipments have been fully maintained. This month there is a seasonal decrease in rail production, and a decrease of a few per cent in steel production this month would be assignable to that influence. If there is no decrease it would appear that other lines of consumption are taking more steel than formerly. Thus the general showing as to steel demand is very favorable indeed.

BIG MILLS DIVERSIFY

There is not a little talk of decreased steel production by smaller mills, with an admission that the large producers may be maintaining output. As a matter of fact the cases of reduced output are few. Only one is definitely reported in the Pittsburgh district, a mill specializing on automobile steel. The large mills, with diversified finished products, divert steel from one department to another. Thus some consumers may receive more steel than formerly and eventually the test will come whether they really need more steel.

As to the volume of steel buying having decreased, that is not a measure of steel consumption in present circumstances. This is a time of year when buyers are less likely to make forward commitments, and when it was clear steel deliveries were going to improve buyers would naturally drop to a shorter range of covering.

It is better to consider the actual pace of consumption. There has been a decrease in automobile production and a decrease in rail production is in progress. Otherwise there is no visible decrease. On the contrary, the agricultural implement industry is ordering steel more freely than in June, when its buying was off somewhat on account of change of season and uncertainty since dispelled, as to the outcome of the crops.

AUTO RECESSION SEASONAL

Automobile production is doing fully as well as should be expected. It is decidedly a seasonal affair and it has shown no more than normal seasonal decrease. There has been no reaction, as had been feared, as a result of the phenomenally heavy production early in the year. Then there was much talk about dealers being overstocked, indicating a special decrease in production later to equalize. That theory has been exploded by the bald facts. Computing average monthly variation by the experience of the last five years, each month this year has shown substantially the same variation from the expectancy thus found, approximately one-third increase. The official reports showed 33.7 per cent excess for the month of June and 33.5 per cent excess for the six months. The preliminary report for July, by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, shows only 23 per cent excess, but uniformly these preliminary statements have run below the official figures subsequently issued. Applying a correction based on the June divergence, the 500,000 cars and trucks, United States and Canada, now reported for July may be revised to 528,000, which would show 30 per cent excess.

FOLLOWING PRECEDENT

For seven months automobile production has been running quite uniformly one-third above what would be expected for this year by the former rate of increase, and it has shown substantially the same variation month by month as in the past. July production was in the same relation to production of the preceding six months as has prevailed, on an average, in the past. By experience, the last five months of a year should average 17 to 18 per cent less production monthly, than the first seven months averaged, and there is nothing visible at present to indicate a departure from that precedent.

Nearly all the finished steel products are perfectly steady in price, having shown no variation for months. The reference includes bars, shapes, plates, pipe and rails. Black and galvanized sheets recently declined, losing the advance announced in February, but never observed throughout the trade. Wire nails have been growing easier, district by district, for fully two months and the recession, 10 cents a keg, is now practically universal. Cold rolled strips are reported a trifle firmer.

Makes Study of Foreign Steel Treatment

MASSILLON, O., Aug. 10.—M. A. Grossman, chief research metallurgist of the Central Alloy Steel Corporation, sailed for Europe to continue his study of the special European steels which the company is preparing to produce in this country. Through its close association with Krupp and other European research organizations, Central Alloy Steel Corporation is developing several materials which are expected to find wide markets in the United States.

Among European steels already in full production are nirosta, the Krupp stainless steel, and nitralloy, which is case-hardened by nitrogen. A new Krupp material, izett, to be produced exclusively in the United States by Central Alloy, has just been announced.

Stockholders Offered Rights by Duke Co.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Duke Power Company will offer stockholders rights to purchase on or before October 1 additional common stock in proportion of one new share for 10 now held as of record August 15. The subscription price is $100 a share and approximately 90,000 shares are involved.

WATER POWER DIMINISHING

The production of electricity by water power during June was only 40 per cent of the total production of electric energy in the United States, as compared with 43 per cent in May and 44 per cent in June of the previous year. This reflects the beginning of the diminishing stream flow in many parts of the United States during this summer's drought. Analyzed by the various interconnected sections of the country, the drop in the production of water power has been somewhat startling and emphasizes the dependence of hydro-electric plants upon steam stations for the maintenance of regular and uninterrupted service during the ordinary course of nature's vagaries.

In Massachusetts, for example, the output of hydro-electric power decreased from 70,618,000 kilowatt-hours in May to 46,896,000 in June—a drop of one-third. This deficiency was offset by an increased output from the steam plants of the interconnected systems, those of Rhode Island, in particular, rising from 30,776,000 to 46,990,000 units, or by more than 50 per cent.

A similar situation took place at Conowingo, on the Susquehanna. Here the output of water power in Maryland decreased from 179,176,000 kilowatt-hours in May to 97,141,000 in June—a drop of almost one-half. On the other hand, the steam power production in Pennsylvania increased from 492,004,000 to 575,027,000 units, thus largely compensating for the deficiency of hydro-power in the interconnected lines.

For the first six months of 1929, the average amount of electricity generated by water power was 38 1-3 per cent of the total, as compared with 41 per cent for the corresponding period last year and 39½ per cent for the entire year 1928.

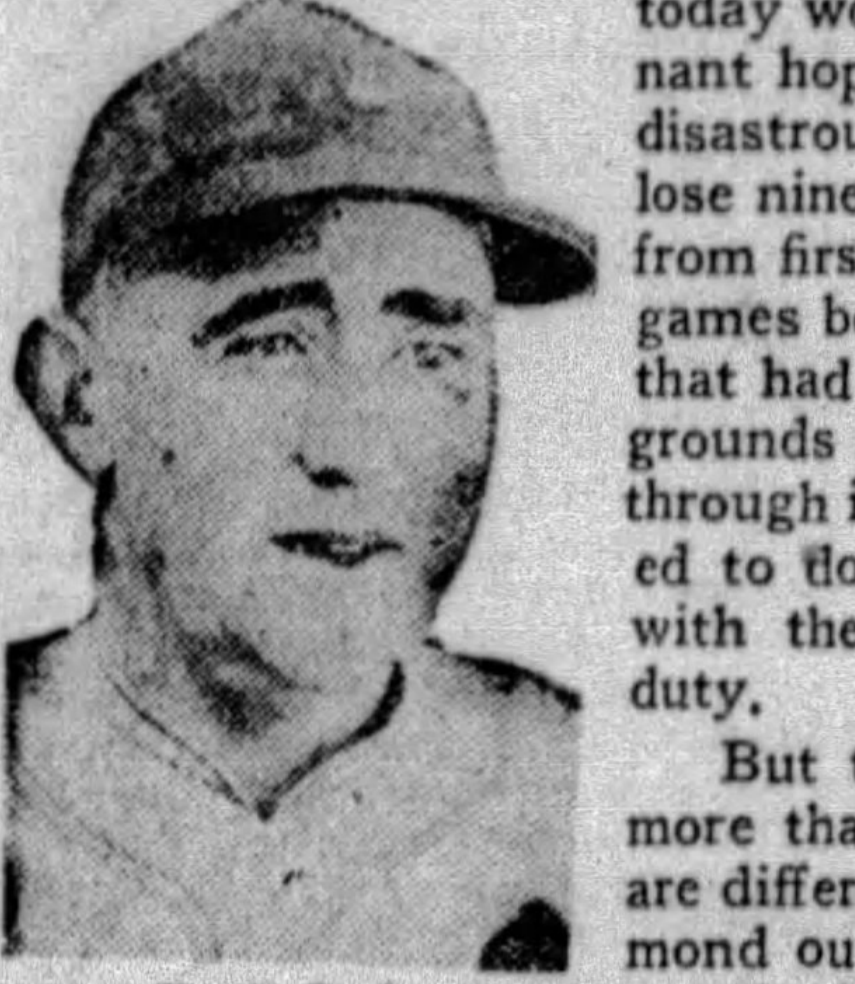
ODD RECORD BY BUCS AGAINST EAST



Donie Bush.

ORDINARILY, at this late stage of the season, in the case of an average ball club, such a hard trip as the 17-game Eastern jaunt on which Manager Donie Bush leads his Pirates today would mean the killing of all pennant hope for a team that had fared so disastrously on the home grounds as to lose nine out of 16 contests and to drop from first place to a point six and a half games behind the new leaders. A team that had been smashed flat on the home grounds after losing three star regulars through injuries could hardly be expected to do any better on the road, even with the crippled luminaries back on duty.

But the Buccaneers are something more than an average ball club. They are different from the general run of diamond outfits in the sense that they are seemingly stronger on the road than at home. No matter how badly they may slump on their own lot, they have the unusual quality of being able to play like champions in the enemy's land.

PITTSBURGH'S comparative records at home and abroad against the four clubs that they will face on the journey that has its starting point in Brooklyn today are the most peculiar in the major leagues for 1929. It seems very improbable that a team which has lost more games than it has won against four other outfits on its own field would be able to win an average of better than two out of every three contests played with the same clubs away from home, but that's what the Buccaneers have done this year.

Against the Giants, Robins, Braves and Phillies at Forbes Field the Bushmen have won but 13 games against 14 lost. That's only .481 baseball. But against the same four teams on their own grounds, Father Pitt's ballers have won 18 games against only eight defeats, which is a gait of .692.

EVERY Eastern club except Boston has won more games at Forbes Field than it has lost there, or has at least broken even. In the East, however, there isn't a single city in which the Bucs have not scored more victories than defeats.

New York won four out of seven here, but lost four out of seven to the Corsairs in Gotham; the Phillies won five out of eight here, but lost five out of six in Quakertown; the Robins split even in six games here, but lost five out of six in Brooklyn; the Braves lost four out of six here and dropped four out of seven in Boston. The inconsistency is one of those diamond oddities that can't be figured out. It's just baseball.

Steve Swetonic.

STEVE SWETONIC did not become successful at once as a starting pitcher in his first year in the majors. He has started 11 times for the Bucs this year, and only three times has he gone the route. On eight occasions it was found necessary to lift him. But as a relief and finishing pitcher he has given the Pittsburgh club great service. His splendid work yesterday in holding the Cardinals to four hits in 6 2-3 innings and saving the game after Larry French's failure was only another chapter added to a long story of exceptionally good relief hurling.

YESTERDAY'S game was the eighth that Swetonic has finished this year for other Pittsburgh pitchers. Carmen Hill, with 10 to his credit, is the only Pirate slabman who has been used as a finishing hurler in a great number of contests. In addition, Swetonic has served as relief flinger at various stages of nine other events.

By winning yesterday—Pittsburgh's third straight win—Steve kept up the Pirates' remarkable sequence of victories against the St. Louis club. That makes 12 times in succession that the Bucs have defeated the Cardinals. Of 15 games played with the locals this season, not counting one tie, the Redbirds have won only two. Swetonic was the losing pitcher in one of those two games, and French lost the decision in the other.

A READER who signs himself "A Left-Handed Fan" writes to ask what are the records made by the Pirates and Cubs this season in games in which the opposing pitchers who won or lost the decisions were southpaws.

The query brings to light a striking similarity between the marks of the two clubs. Against left-hand pitching the Pirates have won 17 games and lost nine, while the Cubs have won 17 and lost eight, a difference of just one game in the "Lost" column.

William Wrigley, Jr.

WHEN Martin Howes asked William Wrigley, Jr., why he bought the Chicago Cubs, the Bruin owner replied: "Because, long ago, when I was a salesman on the road, people used to say to me, 'Oh, Chicago isn't much of a place—even its National League baseball team is owned by outsiders. So I made up my mind then that, if ever I could, I'd buy the team and bring the ownership to Chicago. And when I was a kid I was crazy about baseball—as every American is—but I never had time to go to a game. I used to hear the shouting over the fence as I went by on my job. Now I never miss a game. It's great to be just a fan."

WRIGLEY holds that baseball is too much of a business to be a sport, and too much of a sport to be a business. If the management wants $200,000 to buy the contracts of star players it has to go to the club owner to get the money. That's where Wrigley comes in on it as a business. It isn't so much a sport then.

However, in the running of the team, Wrigley says he never interferes with Manager Joe McCarthy, who knows the technicalities of baseball much better than the owner does. That's where it is too much of a sport to be a business, as he explains it.

REPORTS of yesterday's game in Philadelphia say that Guy Bush won his tenth consecutive victory, but the records show that he has won 11 in a row, beating Burleigh Grimes' total of 10 straight. Unless the scorer's decision has been changed without public notice, Bush got credit for Chicago's victory over Boston on June 10, in which he pitched 4 1-3 innings.

That's one. Since then he has defeated St. Louis on June 19 and 27, Cincinnati on July 2 and 3 (pitching the last two innings of an 11-inning game on July 2), New York on July 10, Philadelphia on July 15, Brooklyn on July 20, Philadelphia on July 28, Boston on August 1 and Philadelphia on August 9. Speaking of hurling records, Fred Fitzsimmons, of the Giants, has allowed Cincinnati to score in only three innings of the last 53 he has pitched against them. Yesterday's victory was his fifth over the Reds in seven games.

Melvin Sheppard.

DISCUSSIONS as to what chance women sprinters will ever have to equal the speed of men bring from Melvin Sheppard, once-famous runner, the opinion that there never can be any comparison. "I cannot conceive how a girl will ever reach the men's 100-yard title of 9.3-5 seconds, or even 10 flat," he says. "Personally, I think 11 seconds is about the girls' limit for 100 yards, and 6 seconds for 50 yards. Ten yards is about the distance that will separate a girl champion from a man in 100 yards when a girl reaches the limit of her capabilities. About five yards will separate them at 50."

CHAMP BIDS FOR THIRD WIN IN ROW

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 10.—(AP).—Carl Kauffmann, the poker-faced shotmaker from Pittsburgh, is battling for his third straight national public links golf championship today by meeting Milton Soncrant, a Toledo mail man, in the 36-hole final at Forest Park.

Carl Kauffmann

Displaying the same steady brand of golf that has made him the perennial champion of the nation's public links, Kauffmann entered the final round yesterday without much difficulty, defeating Johnny Boyd, of Philadelphia, 3 and 2, in the morning, and John Hornsby, a Topeka railroad clerk, 5 and 3, in the semi-finals. Soncrant crushed Frank Connelly, of Detroit, 5 and 3, in the morning, and then fought to the twenty-first hole before he conquered Wesley Casper, of Louisville, former Kentucky amateur champion, one up, to become a finalist.

The triumphs of Kauffmann and Soncrant, who left the private links ranks several years ago because of financial circumstances, were tournament "naturals." They tied with Patsy Tiso, of New York City, for medalist honors, each ending the 36-hole test with 151 totals, or seven over par, for the tricky championship course. Tiso was eliminated in the second round by Hornsby.

KAUFFMANN FAVORITE

Of the two, however, the champion goes into the final a heavy favorite. While Soncrant has been shooting both brilliant and poor golf, Kauffmann has been consistently brilliant. In the 95 holes he has been forced to play since the tournament started Tuesday, he has been but 10 strokes over par. Tournament experience favors him, too, as Soncrant has been all but out of the game for the past five years.

Kauffmann had little or no difficulty in taming Boyd, who had been yearning for a championship match with him for years. He grabbed the lead on the third hole and was never headed thereafter, taking a three-up lead at the turn with par 37 golf to the chesty Philadelphian's 41. Boyd tightened up coming home and was but one over par for the seven holes they traveled, but the champion played a safety game and breezed out to an easy triumph.

FINDS HORNSBY HARD

Hornsby, one of the upset artists of the championship park, gave the champion his hardest fight of the tournament, even though he did lose by a decisive margin, he started out by winning the first hole in a par four, but Kauffmann came back to win the next two holes, with a pair of par threes. Hornsby forged ahead again by winning the next two holes in perfect figures. After halving the next two holes in par, Kauffmann got started, winning the next four holes to go three up.

Satisfied with his margin, he settled back to his safety game and they halved the next two holes. But Hornsby, realizing defeat was all but inevitable, threw caution aside and lost. He pressed and took chances and as a result, Kauffmann blasted through and clinched the match by winning the fourteenth and fifteenth holes.

Casper fought one of the most brilliant comebacks in the tournament to no avail in his losing battle against Soncrant. Three down at the turn, the gained a half at the tenth and then shot better than par golf to snatch the next five holes, to become one up for the first time. Soncrant stopped his rush with a half on the sixteenth and then evened it up by winning the seven-

MONDAY—A KING ON HORSEBACK

PITTSBURGHERS DOPE RIP'S PUZZLE

Five readers of Ripley's daily Believe It Or Not cartoons in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, correctly solved Ripley's baseball poser of a recent date about how a team could make three triples, one double, two singles and two stolen bases in one inning and yet not score.

More than 10,000 answers piled in on Ripley from all over the country, and 103 were correct solutions of the problem. Each of the winners will receive an autographed copy of Ripley's best seller, "Believe It Or Not."

FIVE WIN AWARDS

Following are the Sun-Telegraph's lucky readers:

J. G. Flanagan, 219 Joyce Terrace, Hazelwood.
A. G. Turner, Box 63, R. F. D. No. 7, Bellevue.
P. J. Rickenbach, 405 Penn avenue.
Norman Nelson, 242 Dilworth street, Mt. Washington.
LeRoy Hay 109 Monitor avenue, Ben Avon.

Third batter doubles.

Fourth batter singles and third batter does not advance.

Third and fourth batters work double steal.

Fifth batter singles, filling the bases.

Sixth batter hits a long safe drive. Third batter loafs, falls or in some other manner is incapacitated between third and home, holding up scoring. If either the fourth batter passes the third, or the fifth batter passes the fourth after the sixth batter reaches third base, or if the sixth batter passes the fifth batter or is tagged out between third and home before third batter can score, he is credited with triple and there is no scoring.

Troeh, McCullough Tie in Trap Shoot

YORKLYN, Del., Aug. 10.—(AP.)—In the third day's shoot of the T. Clarence Marshall target tournament here yesterday a tie resulted for first place—Frank Troeh, of Portland, Ore., and D. H. McCullough, of Charlotte, N. C., each getting 148 of 150 clay birds.

Troeh broke straight in several of his 25-bird braces, as did the Southerner. As each was in a different class, there was no shoot-off necessary. Class A prize was the same as Class B, and Troeh took the former and McCullough the latter.

Mark Arie, of Chicago, fell down in yesterday's sport, getting 142 of a possible 150. In the women's division, Mrs. E. Garrett, Oakland, Cal., had 106 hits of a possible 150.

YANKEE STARS REPEAT WINS IN SWEDEN

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Aug. 10.—(AP.)—American athletes repeated their triumphs over Europe's stars yesterday in the second day of the international invitation track and field meet of the Goeta Sporting Club. Eddie Tolan, of the University of Michigan, scored his second sprinting triumph, turning in the best time in the 200-meter dash. Tolan came close to record time, covering the distance in 21.1 seconds. Gillmeister, of Germany, was clocked in 21.3 seconds and Pete Bowen, of Pittsburgh, in 21.4.

Fred Sturdy, Yale pole vaulter, scored an easy triumph in his event, clearing the bar at 3.95 meters (12 fet 11⅛ inches), Dick Rockaway, of Ohio State won the 200-meter hurdles in the time of 24.5 seconds. Leo Lermond, the Boston A. A. ace, added a fourth triumph for America by winning the 3,000 meter run. His time was 8:36.4.

The discus throw went to Stenrud, of Norway, with a heave of 46.27 meters (151 feet, 9 89-128 inches). Leo Sexton, of Georgetown, placed fourth in the event, tossing the disc 40.30 meters (132 feet, 3 41-64 inches). Otto Peltzer, German ace, won the 800 meter run in 1:55.8.

In a special trial at 100 meters, Tolan made the time of 10.6 seconds while Bowen made 10.7.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The rejuvenated Pirates were not on Manhattan Island long this morning before heading for Brooklyn, where they will begin their last Eastern invasion this afternoon in a doubleheader with the Robins.

Manager Bush has two southpaws and a righthander all set for mound activities today. Uncle Robbie's boys are likely to gaze upon the slants of one of their old buddies in one of the battles, for Jess Petty is all primed for action. Fred Fussell is also ready, as is Heinie Meine. The Pittsburgh pilot said he would name his slab starters from among these three.

It is likely that Sparky Adams will be in the shortfield this afternoon. Stewie Clarke had to leave yesterday's contest in the late rounds with a lame leg. The youngster strained himself in chasing a foul fly early in the fight.

WIN HOME FINAL

The Pirates made their farewell a pleasant one to 5,000 fans by ringing up another victory over the

SECTION I

SECTION II

Wilkinsburg at Duquesne Light; Minnetonka at Mount Lebanon; College Avenue at Westinghouse.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Don Mattern's University Club host and the College Hill combine of Howdy Campbell top the card on this afternoon's program of Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League competition. The varsity racqueteers, reposing in last place in the Section I standing, face the difficult, if not impossible, task of copping eight of the nine tussles that make up the match if they are to dislodge the Beaver Falls luminaries and thrust the latter into the cellar to meet the challenge of the champion outfit of Section II for the right to joust in the upper division in 1930.

SINGLE SEC. I MATCH

The University Club-College Hill affair is the lone top sector contest on tap for today, Edgewood, Stanton Heights and Westinghouse having wound up their campaigns and P. A. A. and South Hills, with a postponed fracas to be played off, having been as yet unable to set a date for action.

Capt. Mattern of the Schenley Farms crew will run his most potent line-up into the melee and, with the aid of the familiar surroundings of the varsity bailiwick, hopes to thump the invading Beaverites soundly enough to switch positions with them in the team standing. Frank McClintock will lead the U. C. attack, Charley Woods, Mattern, Wally Arensberg, Jim Fickinger, Bill Bickel and George Kennedy being set to back him up.

College Hill will rely on the redoubtable Don Reader, recent conqueror of McCook Reed, to head the list, with Johnny Hecker, Capt. Campbell, Bill Potts, Dick Campbell and Vernon Flinner rounding out the troop.

Meanwhile, in Section II, the speeding Wilkinsburg aggregation will visit the Stadium lair of the Pitt Panther to engage Duquesne Light in a seance that the Holy Citians should be favored to cop handily, though the No. 1 tilt, involving Boyd, Wash-Jeff ace, with Charley Gaut, veteran Lightman, is apt to prove worth traveling some distance to see.

College Avenue, with a chance to push on toward third post, will seek to beard Westinghouse Seconds in their den at East Pittsburgh, and Minnetonka will come in from Verona for a thrust at the title-chasing Mount Lebanon performers, who spilled the dope and hurtled themselves back into the seat as serious crown contenders by overwhelming College Avenue, 8-1, on the College-and-Walnut rectangles last Sunday.

LOCAL STARS TRAVEL

A general exodus of local net stars toward foreign fields and new laurels gets under way tonight when Pittsburgh Center junior and boy satellites shove off for Culver, Ind., and the national junior and boys' championships to be staged there throughout the coming week. Heading the local group are Billy O'Loughlin, Duke Prep luminary, and Harry Tsarvais, Beaver Falls darkhorse. O'Loughlin copped his third consecutive Center junior title here a fortnight ago, while Tsarvais slipped in unannounced to depose Paul Elliott, of Wilkinsburg, as premier of the boys.

Frank Broida, Harvard freshman southpaw, and Wally Arensberg, leader of the crack Shady Side Academy court array, will also represent the Steel City among the juniors, with Elliott joining Tsarvais in carrying district colors into the nationwide boys' event.

Tomorrow and Monday, Pittsburgh netmen will fare forth to Mountain Lake Park for the tenth annual Western Maryland championships to be held there under the capable and hospitable auspices of the Women's Civic Club of that charming Blue Ridge resort. In the neighborhood of 100 contestants will take part in the various branches of the clashing, and among those present will be a large and talented delegation from the Western Pennsylvania area—not to mention strong aspirants from Washington, Baltimore, Wheeling, Cumberland and intermediate points.

The Mountain Lake Park conclave has become a fixture among racquet gatherings of the section and is without question one of the most popular and enjoyable meetings of the entire year. George Sawin, first man on the Westinghouse squad of the P. T. A. Inter-Club League, will serve as chairman of the committee in charge of the Western Maryland play.

LAULER TO MARRY

Jack Lauler and Dave O'Loughlin, P. A. A. standbys, are in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., for the wedding today of Lauler to Miss Ruth Crandall, of New York City. Bert Kelly, former Pittite, who has been competing in tournaments hereabouts for several seasons and who is now located in Schenectady, will be among those on deck to make merry at the nuptials. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom will leave for an extended lake trip, while O'Loughlin will return home to prepare for the Pittsburgh invasion of Fairmont, W. Va., a week from tomorrow.

ILLINOIS SPORT BOARD NAMED

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP.)—A millionaire coal operator, a regimental commander in the World War, and a banker, all Chicagoans, are the new members of the Illinois State Athletic Commission.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson, at Springfield yesterday named Gen. John V. Clinnin, lawyer, soldier and ardent devotee of athletics, as chairman of the commission.

George F. Getz, wealthy coal operator, big game hunter, who was associated with the late Tex Rickard in the promotion of the Dempsey-Tunney battle at Soldier Field two years ago, and Frederick Gardner, vice president of the Illinois Central Bank and Trust Company, were appointed the other two members of the commission.

Gov. Emmerson's appointments were hailed as the beginning of a new era in boxing. The new commissioners represent the highest type of sportsmen and business men. The new chairman, Gen. Clinnin, with an insight into the machinations of boxing and wrestling, has a reputation of being a strict disciplinarian and can be depended upon, his friends say, to rule with an iron hand.

U. S. HOLDS EDGE IN WIGHTMAN CUP PLAY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 10.—(AP.)—The American Helens of tennis, from Berkely, Cal., asserted their skill yesterday to give the United States a lead of two matches to one over Great Britain in the battle for the Wightman Cup, emblem of supremacy in women's competition.

World Champion Helen Wills over powered Mrs. Phoebe Watson, 6-1, 6-4, after which Helen Jacobs staged two sensational rallies to conquer Betty Nuttall, youthful star of the English team, at 7-5, 8-6.

Instead of faltering after these two setbacks, the British forces gathered strength and romped off with the doubles match, third and concluding contest of the day, when Mrs. Watson combined with Mrs. Peggy Saunders Michell to defeat Helen Wills and Edith Cross, 6-4, 6-1.

END DUELS TODAY

The two-day series for the trophy, now in possession of the British after an even split in six years of competition, will be decided today with four matches. The American team is counting on another twin triumph from the California Helens to win back the cup.

Miss Wills was harder pressed to win than possibly in any match she has played in the last three years. Mrs. Watson forced nine of the 17 games to deuce, fought back to even terms after trailing at 2-4 in the second set and three times was within a point of forcing the set to deuce before Miss Wills reeled off five successive points and won the tenth and deciding game.

MRS. WATSON SURPRISES

Mrs. Watson, to the complete surprise of the critics, as well as Miss Wills, chose to battle it out from the baselines, where the American is as supreme as any woman player in the world.

The gallery of some 7,000 fans gasped repeatedly as Mrs. Watson not only held her own but often outdrove the hardest feminine hitter in the game. In the face of so determined an opponent, Miss Wills could take few chances.

The match between the two youthful rivals, Helen Jacobs and Betty Nuthall, was a ding-dong affair. Beaming Betty, taking the first 10 points in a row, raced into a lead of 4-1 in the first set only to have bare-legged Helen rally to take six of the last seven games.

On top of this the American girl piled up a lead of 5-2 in the second set, giving her 11 winning games out of 14 in a row. But Miss Nuthall, throwing caution to the winds, slashed through the four successive games while allowing her opponent only five points. She led at 6-5, and Miss Jacobs seemed to be fast tiring. Once again the tide shifted.

WINS WITH BACKHAND

Miss Jacobs regained control of her service, and with a backhand that sparkled brilliantly, she won the next three games for the set and match.

Mrs. Michell, although well supported by her partner, was the star of the English doubles victory, smashing with deadly effect at the net. The team work of the English pair was much superior, once they gained control in the first set to overcome a lead of 4-2 which Miss Wills and Miss Cross had piled up. The Americans lost 10 out of the last 11 games.

Today's schedule of matches: 2:30 p. m., Miss Jacobs vs. Mrs. Watson; 3:30, Miss Cross vs. Mrs. Michell; 4:30, Miss Wills vs. Miss Nuthall; 5:30, Mrs. Hazel Wightman and Miss Jacobs vs. Mrs. B. C. Covell and Mrs. Dorothy Shepherd-Baron.

STOGIES LEAD MID-ATLANTIC

FAIRMONT, Aug. 10.—Fairmont dropped from the lead in the Mid-Atlantic League here yesterday, losing to the Wheeling Stogies by a 5 to 3 score. As a result, the Stogies replaced the Black Diamonds at the top. Seven double plays, thought to be a league record, featured the game.

JEANNETTE WINS

JOHNSTOWN, Aug. 10.—Jeannette defeated Johnstown here yesterday 7 to 5, White outpitching Cochran and Thompson. Camille, Johnstown second base recruit, hit a home run in the eighth inning.

SCOTTIES LOSE

SCOTTDALE, Aug. 10.—Cumberland defeated Scottdale here yesterday 10 to 3, Raze turning in another triumph to add to his long string. The Colts pounded out 14 hits from the delivery of Beckman and Heise.

GENERALS WIN

CHARLEROI, Aug. 10.—Clarksburg defeated Charleroi here yesterday, 5 to 4.

Having earned a tie with the Bachrach Giants in the first game of the series at Forbes Field last evening, when John Beckwith hit a home run over the scoreboard in the ninth, the Homestead Grays are set to battle the Giants again this afternoon.

Following the contest today, the Grays and the New Yorkers will travel to Cleveland for two games tomorrow. This evening, the Grays appear at Homewood for a battle with the Inter-County Leaguers.

The Grays went into the final inning last evening trailing by two runs, but after Graham had reached first, Beckwith put the ball over the scoreboard and brought about a tie.

HORNES DEFEATED

In the C. and I. League, Reick-McJunkin helped its standing by defeating the Joseph Horne team at Horne Camp, 6 to 4. Homestead Aces walloped the Duquesne Builders, 7 to 1, in a Greater Pittsburgh League game.

The Philadelphia Company outfit had an easy time with the Equitable Auto Club, walloping them 14 to 6 in a Philadelphia Company League affair. Pleasant Valley downed the Reineckers, 9 to 5, in a City League fracas.

The Jimmy Smiths played a 3-3 tie with Homewood in an independent struggle. North Bessemer defeated Reliance Life, 6 to 4, and Book Shoe nosed out a 2-to-1 verdict over the Swissvale Firemen.

AUTO, CYCLE RACES TODAY

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 10.—The motorcycle races, originally scheduled for last Saturday, but postponed on account of rain, will be staged at the Arden Downs track here today, with the entire entry list that was on hand for the event last week present.

Efforts will be made by some of the crack drivers of the tri-state district to set a new record for the 10-mile distance, riding solo. Among those who are expected to take the lead in the events today are Lee Boyer, Tony Galavacci and Cyclone Taylor, Pittsburgh; Jim McAbee, McKeesport; Hah Chapman, Jamestown, N. Y., and Art Smith, Columbus, O.

Four races are on the card, in addition to bicycle and scooter events.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Aug. 10.—Only a heavy rainstorm at race time will prevent the running of the 100-lap speed event and the 10-mile stock car race, an event postponed from last Saturday, on the local speedway this afternoon.

Fifteen cars will start in the 100-lap grind, and some of the best known pilots in the tri-state area will compete. The stock car prelim, at 2 o'clock Standard time, is also attracting much interest.

PIRATES OPEN EASTERN TRIP

Cardinals. The Redbirds have been pie a la mode for the Buccos this season, they feeling their thirteenth setback in 15 games as they lost, 7 to 6, in the last contest of a two-game series.

Steve Swetonic was the hero of the closing game in the Oakland Orchard. Steve was rushed to Fogarty Knoll while the Redbirds were making gay with the slants of Larry French in the third round. In the second inning the invaders nicked Our Larry for four runs and five hits and when they began to break out again in the third, Pilot Donie called a halt and Swetonic took up the burden.

Steve was trailing his opponents at the time of his induction, but he was hardly in the contest ere he had to go to the plate. His first joust with Clarence Mitchell brought a rollicking three-bagger to right that was the signal for a three-run rally, and the Pirates tied it up in the fourth inning, partly on account of another hit uncorked by Steve.

LEAD IN FIFTH

With Fred Frankhouse in operation, the Freebooters jumped out in front with a two-run lead in the fifth round. Sylvester Johnson relieved Frankhouse after Sheely's bat had driven in the two tallies. From that point to the eighth, the Swede held the home batters in check, Swetonic also holding to a pretty clip from the third to the seventh, when Jim Bottomley hit his twenty-fifth homer into the rightfield stands with Frisch on the runways. The blow tied up the old ball game.

One was out in the home half of the eighth when Dick Bartell planted a single in left. Brother Lloyd also singled, Dick reaching second. P. Waner popped out, but Traynor connected for a single to right that scored Richard with the winning run.

Frisch, the Fordham Flash, scared the crowd with two out in the ninth. High reached first on a wide throw by Swetonic, the pitcher making the bad shot after a fine stop. Frisch's bat spoke with venom and a homer seemed to be in the making. P. Waner, however, was able to haul in the smash with his back close to the deep rightfield wall.

The victory of the Pirates preparatory to leaving Pittsburgh made it three triumphs in a row for the ailing team.

SPENCER SETS RECORD

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 10.—(INS.)—Freddie Spencer, American bike campion, has another mark to his credit today. Last night Spencer captured the 25-mile middle distance championship race at the New York Velodrome and in doing so pedaled the distance in the remarkable time of 49:28 2-5, thereby breaking the record set by Alf Goullet in 1925.

BABE AGAIN

ALBANY, Aug. 10.—Babe Ruth hit a home run as the Yankees were defeated by Albany, of the Eastern League, in an exhibition game here yesterday, 8 to 7.

GREYHOUNDS OPEN MEET TONIGHT

Local sports fanciers will be introduced to a new thrill this evening when the Keystone Kennel Club inaugurates a greyhound racing meet at the remodeled Bridgevill Speedway.

The sport will be put on with all the frills attendant to such attractions in other parts of the country, where it has proved very successful. The meeting will run from three to four weeks if the plans of the promoters work out and eight races will be offered nightly.

FAST DOGS HERE

More than 200 of the fastest racing dogs in the country have been assembled at the track and some keen sport is anticipated. The races are scheduled over various distances, some of them on the flat while the others will be over the hurdles. The first event is scheduled for 8:15 o'clock each night.

An expert staff of dog-race men has been assembled at the track under the direction of R. K. Leighton, of Boston, manager of the meet, and arrangements have been rushed to get the plant in order for the opening night's racing. The grandstand has been covered for protection against rain and a special lighting system installed to permit the spectators to witness the races under almost daylight conditions.

HOOSIER DOG TRACK CLOSED

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 10.—(AP.)—The Falls City Kennel Club's racing course near Jeffersonville, Ind., was dark last night and the operators of the dog track called off a scheduled nine-race program.

After an opening skirmish before Circuit Judge George C. Kopp, the racing interests indicated they have adopted a policy of strict compliance with the orders of the Indiana courts.

C. B. McBride, attorney for Joe H. Adams, promoter of the track, said the racing plant will remain closed until a decision is reached on the injunction suit filed before Judge Kopp by Prosecuting Attorney Walter E. Prentice.

DENVER, Aug. 10.—(AP.)—A temporary injunction issued yesterday prohibited all further activities of the Dog Breeders and Exhibitors Association of Colorado, Inc., which had opened its dog racing track near here. Many persons prominent in Denver society were [illegible] the track Thursday night when deputy sheriffs placed an official and four employes of the association under technical arrest.

Dunn, Former Local Sports Writer Dies

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10—Walter S. Dunn, former Pittsburgh sports writer, died here yesterday in the United States Naval Hospital, after a lingering illness. Dunn was 43 years old and leaves his wife, Bernice, sister of Lefty Weinert, former Chicago Cub hurler, and two sons. He was formerly connected with the Gazette Times in Pittsburgh, was with the Public Ledger here for more than eight years and later was sporting editor of a Reading, Pa., newspaper.

John Golden on Way To Third N. J. Title

WARREN POINT, N. J., Aug. 10.—(INS.)—Seven strokes ahead of his field, Johnny Golden was headed today for his third successive New Jersey open golf title.

With only 36 holes more to be played, Golden's lead seemed ample to withstand even the most determined attack.

CUBS REFUSE TO ENCOURAGE BUCS, GIANTS

BRUINS MATCH VICTORIES OF RIVALS

Associated Press.

Just how to overtake a ball team which piles up an impressive lead, then refuses to lose more than the minimum number of games is a problem which the greatest minds of baseball have never been able to solve. And that is the question which is puzzling the guiding spirits of the Pittsburgh Pirates and the New York Giants.

The pennant hopes of the second and third place teams in the National League must perforce remain very slim while the Cubs are winning four out of five games, as they are doing now.

The Pirates slipped just as Chicago reached the peak of its winning stride, and now, instead of being in first place, the boys from the Smoky City are languishing six and one-half games behind the top. They returned to winnings ways a few days ago, clipping off three victories in a row, but before that they had dropped six out of seven, while the Cubs were going right along at the rate that has brought them 21 victories in their last 25 games.

CUBS, BUCS WIN

The current series between the Eastern and Western teams bring little prospect of improvement. The Pirates did a neat job yesterday, winning their twelfth game in succession from the St. Louis Cardinals, 7 to 6, but the Cubs stopped off in Philadelphia long enough to smack the Phillies by a 12 to 6 count, then moved on for a series against the Boston Braves.

Meanwhile the Giants, trailing along a bad third in the standing, gained the slim consolation of the complete supremacy Fred Fitzsimmons holds over Cincinnati. The bulky New York hurler, who shut out the Reds four times in a row, gained revenge for his four-hit defeat in his last appearance against Cincinnati by holding the Reds to the same number of blows while his mates pounded out a 7-to-1 victory. Every man in the Giant lineup contributed to the 15-hit attack on May and Kolp.

BROWNS BEAT CHISOX

The American League went through a day of almost complete inaction as most of the teams were on the way to new scenes of activity. The St. Louis Browns and Chicago White Sox staged the only battle of the day in the younger league, and it was not much in the way of a scrap after the first few innings, the Browns coasting in to a 9-to-4 victory.

CHAMP SEEKS THIRD TITLE

WINS ON LIST

On the eighteenth green, both missed short putts and went to the extra holes. On the twenty-first hole a sliced tee shot gave the Toledo man his break. Casper shot the ball to the left of the elevated green, while Soncrant's landed within a foot of the carpet. Soncrant then laid his approach to within a foot of the pin, while the Kentuckian dubbed his approach. When his third rolled 16 feet past the pin and his fourth was short by six feet, Casper picked up his opponent's ball and conceded. The match was one of the longest in the tournament's eight years of play.

Soncrant was slow in getting started against Connelly. After three holes had been played he was two down, but he caught his stride and was one up at the turn. He won the next two holes, halved the succeeding two and then won by copping the next two.

Shakespeare had an eagle three on the par-five fifth pole and a birdie on the par-four ninth hole. He went one over par on the fourth, but his eagle and birdie saved the day.

GOLF
AS CHAMPIONS PLAY IT

Answered By
ABE G. ESPINOSA

However, a ball might have a good lie in a trap with banks that slope gradually, where a safer shot could be made by running the ball up with the putter. The choice of a club for a play from a trap near the green should depend upon the nature of the trap and the position of the ball in it.

GROVERS SET GRID PLANS

GROVE CITY, Pa., Aug. 10.—The annual football training camp will be opened at Grove City College, Wednesday, September 4, according to Robert E. Thorn, director of athletics. Until the arrival of Head Coach Charley Berry the following Monday, the candidates will be in charge of Thorn.

Fifty men will make up the squad at the opening of the training season. They will be housed in Memorial Hall, boys' dormitory. Morning and afternoon workouts will be held daily after the arrival of Coach Berry, whose contract with the Boston Red Sox releases him the second week of September.

The period will last two weeks, and in this time Berry will have to develop some gridders capable of filling several gaping holes left in the Crimson squad by graduation last June. Berry's big job will be to develop a set of backs. Among the Crimson stars missing from the squad this year are Capt. Paterlini, of last year's eleven; Ralph Day, whose dashing play has featured for two years; Shupe and Angelo, mainstays for two years, and Bartlebaugh, who was counted on to come through in big style this year, but who will not return to Grove City. Weidman, whose tackle play sparkled last season, was graduated, and Dight, a lineman, is not available.

MOUNTAINEERS CALLED

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 10.—Official notices to candidates eligible for the West Virginia University varsity football team for the season of 1929 were mailed out last Monday from the athletic department under orders of Head Coach Ira Rodgers and Director H. A. Stansbury. Forty-seven men were included on the varsity list, including hold-overs from the 1928 squad, and promising material from the 1929 freshmen group.

The camp at Jacksons Mill, being the eighth session at the State 4-H camp, will hold only for two weeks, because the University will start the registration of students on Monday, September 15, at which time all of the upper-classmen will be in Morgantown.

Tug Phillips Loses On Foul to Mellow

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 10.—An alleged foul blow, delivered by Tug Phillips, of Pittsburgh, in the third round of a scheduled 10-round main event with Johnny Mellow, Detroit, cost the former the bout in the arena here last night.

There was considerable dispute. Ringsiders sitting on that side of the ring where the boys were batting at close range contend that Phillips struck fair, but Referee Jerry Cole ruled otherwise, and after giving Mellow a count of seven, ordered him to his corner and ruled Phillips the loser on a foul. Tug had all the best of the going up to that time.

Phil Zwick, Cleveland bantamweight, won by a technical knockout over Jim Perry, of Alliance, O., in the fourth round of a scheduled eight-round bout. Zwick hit Perry when and how he pleased.

Frankie Rio, Cleveland, and U. S. Carpentier, New Kensington, went six rounds to a draw. Carpentier speeded up after the second round, and Rio had a hard job getting an even break.

Juran Retains Title In Southpaw Tourney

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP.)—Rudy Juran, of Minneapolis, yesterday won the Midlothian Club's twentieth annual southpaw golf championship tournament. Juran played the course in 74-80—154, to defend his title, won last year.

James Emert, St. Louis, finished second with a card of 77-80—157, and Robert C. Wilson, of Chicago, a former champion, was third with a 159 total. Fourth place went to C. Nixon, of Columbus, O., who scored 161.

TILDEN, HUNTER SCORE WINS IN DOUBLES

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 10.—(AP.)—Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter, America's old soldiers of the court, received a warm reception yesterday in their first playing appearance since they returned from the Davis Cup wars abroad.

After drawing a bye and winning two matches, America's first and second ranking players were forced to go five long sets before they beat out Bradshaw Harrison, of the University of Oregon, and Kenneth Apple, of Princeton, to reach the final round of the Meadow Club invitation doubles. The scores were 4-6, 14-12, 5-7, 11-9, 6-2.

DOEG BEATS MANGIN

In the singles semi-finals, Johnny Doeg, of Santa Monica, Cal., outlasted the Newark star, Gregory Mangin, in another memorable five-set tussle, 8-10, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, 7-5, and Fritz Mercur, of Bethlehem, Pa., turned back Norman Farquharson, of South Africa, 6-0, 6-2, 6-4. Mercur and Doeg meet in the finals today.

Tilden and Hunter battled grimly against what at times appeared to be sure elimination. Harrison and the lithe Appel forged into a lead of one set to none, then made it two to one, but were unable to withstand the rush of their more experienced adversaries.

Previously the veterans had beaten James Lee and William Richardson, schoolboy members of the Southampton colony, 6-0, 6-3, and had come from behind to defeat Bruce Barnes, of the University of Texas, and Eddie Jacobs, University of Pittsburgh, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

CLASH IN FINAL

Tilden and Hunter will clash in the final today with the winner of a match between the Mangin-Berkely Bell team and a foreign pair—Farquharson and Paul Derico, of Cambridge and Oxford universities respectively.

Bell, of the University of Texas, and Mangin, of Georgetown, sprang a surprise by defeating the second seeded team of Fritz Mercur and J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, in the quarter-finals.

Athletic Pilot Denies Ehmke To Be Exiled

DETROIT, Aug. 10.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, today denied that he had exiled Howard Ehmke, veteran pitcher on the Athletic staff. Mack did admit that Ehmke had been left in Philadelphia when the team departed for the final Western trip.

It was rumored yesterday that certain of the A's had demanded that Ehmke be banished, claiming that the veteran pitcher's presence bothered them and that he refused to aid them during games in which he pitched.

It was also rumored that Mack had read the riot act to his players. The veteran pilot denied that there was any friction on the club or that Ehmke was to be dropped.

LYON TAKES JUNIOR TITLE

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—(AP.)—Fred Lyon, of Pontiac, Ill., a 19-year-old student at the University of Illinois, yesterday crowned six years of effort by winning the Western Junior golf championship. Lyon, the medalist, defeated another 19-year-old player, Bill Redmond, of Joliet, Ill., making his first try for the title, 5 and 4 in the 36-hole final.

Reaching the peak of his game in the morning round, Lyon laid the groundwork for an unofficial Illinois victory over Notre Dame, where Redmond is a junior. Lyon equalled par in the morning 18 holes and established a lead of four holes. He was out in 35, one under par, and finished with a 70, even par.

Baumer Gets Trapped in Shell Hole in Midst Of Heavy Firing

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Paul Baumer and his soldier comrades all enlisted at 18. During their training, they were abused and persecuted by a former mail-carrier, now Corp. Himmelstross. Hating him, they beat him up the last night. Later, at the front, he appears. One of the privates calls him a "dirty hound." He threatens court-martial. Light sentences are imposed when the lieutenant learns the whole story of the corporal's abuse in camp. Paul and his comrades are back in the front lines. On the way they passed piles of new coffins. Their spirits are low. After days of fighting, the trenches are wrecked. Food is scarce and the barrage is so heavy that none can be brought up. Baumer and his comrades are in hand-to-hand fighting defending their position. After a successful counter-attack, night comes and all is quiet in the trenches. Again the shelling begins; attack, counter-attack, charge, repulse. Young recruits, with little knowledge of warfare, fall the easiest victims. Paul's company has been relieved and casualties are found to be numerous. While in swimming Paul and his comrades speak to several French girls across the canal. That night they visit the girls' home. Paul is granted a furlough but is sorry when he leaves his comrades. Everything at home seems changed and he is not at ease. He hates the silly questions asked about the fighting. Paul goes to see Mrs. Kemmerich and lies to her about the way her son was killed. He has reported back to the camp where he had his first training as a soldier. Paul returns to the front and is glad to be with his old comrades again. The Kaiser reviews the troops and they are disappointed in him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXV.

A PATROL has to be sent out to discover just how far the enemy position is advanced. Since my leave I feel a certain strange attachment to the other fellows, and so I volunteer to go with them. We agree on a plan, slip out through the wire and then divide and creep forward separately. After a while I find a shallow shell-hole and crawl into it. From here I peer forward.

There is moderate machine-gun fire. It sweeps across from all directions, not very heavy, but always sufficient to make one keep down.

A parachute star-shell opens out. The ground lies stark in the pale light, and then the darkness shuts down again blacker than ever. In the trenches we were told there were black troops in front of us. That is nasty, it is hard to see them; they are very good at patrolling, too. And, oddly enough, they are often quite stupid; for instance, both Kat and Kropp were once able to shoot down a black enemy patrol because the fellows in their enthusiasm for cigarets smoked while they were creeping about. Kat and Albert had simply to aim at the glowing ends of the cigarets.

A bomb or something lands close beside me. I have not heard it coming and am terrified. At the same moment a senseless fear takes hold on me. Here I am alone and almost helpless in the dark—perhaps two other eyes have been watching me for a long while from another shell-hole in front of me, and a bomb lies ready to blow me to pieces. I try to pull myself together. It is not my first patrol and not a particularly risky one. But it is the first since my leave, and besides, the lie of the land is still rather strange to me.

I tell myself that my alarm is absurd, that there is probably nothing at all there in the darkness watching me, because otherwise the missile would not have landed so flat.

It is in vain. In whirling confusion my thoughts hum in my brain—I hear the warning voice of my mother, I see the Russians with the flowing beards leaning against the wire fence, I have a bright picture of a canteen with stools, of a cinema in Valenciennes; tormented, terrified, in my imagination I see the grey, impalpable muzzle of a rifle which moves noiselessly before me whichever way I try to turn my head. The sweat breaks out from every pore.

I still continue to lie in my shallow bowl. I look at the time; only a few minutes have passed. My forehead is wet, the sockets of my eyes are damp, my hands tremble, and I am panting softly. It is nothing but an awful spasm of fear, a simple animal fear of poking out my head and crawling on farther.

All my efforts subside like froth into the one desire to be able just to stay lying there. My limbs are glued to the earth. I make a vain attempt; —they refuse to come away. I press myself down on the earth, I cannot go forward, I make up my mind to stay lying there.

But immediately the wave floods over me anew, a mingled sense of shame, of remorse, and yet at the same time of security. I raise myself up a little to take a look around.

My eyes burn with staring into the dark. A starshell goes up;—I duck down again.

I wage a wild and senseless fight, I want to get out of the hollow and yet slide back into it again. I say: "You must, it is your comrades, it is not any idiotic command," and again: "What does it matter to me, I have only one life to lose——"

That is the result of all this leave, I reproach myself bitterly. But I cannot convince myself, I become terribly faint. I raise myself slowly and reach forward with my arms, dragging my body after me and then lie on the edge of the shell hole, half in and half out.

There I hear sounds and drop back. Suspicious sounds can be detected clearly despite the noise of the artillery-fire. I listen; the sound is behind me. They are our people moving along the trench. Now I hear muffled voices. To judge by the tone that might be Kat talking.

At once a new warmth flows through me. These voices, there few quiet words, these footsteps in the trench behind me recall me at a bound from the terrible loneliness and fear of death by which I had been almost destroyed. They are more to me than life, these voices, they are more than motherliness and more than fear; they are the strongest, most comforting thing there is anywhere: they are the voices of my comrades.

I am no longer a shuddering speck of existence, alone in the darkness—I belong to them and they to me, we all share the same fear and the same life, we are nearer than lovers, in a simpler, a harder way; I could bury my face in them, in these voices, these words that have saved me and will stand by me.

* * *

Cautiously I glide out over the edge and snake my way forward. I shuffle along on all fours a bit farther, I keep track of my bearings, look around me and observe the distribution of the gun-fire so as to be able to find my way back. Then I try to get in touch with the others.

I am still afraid, but it is an intelligent fear, an extraordinarily heightened caution. The night is windy and shadows flit hither and thither in the flicker of the gun-fire. It reveals too little and too much. Often I peer ahead, but always for nothing. Thus I advance a long way and then turn back in a wide curve. I have not established touch with the others. Every yard nearer our trench fills me with confidence—and with haste, too. It would be bad to get lost now.

Then a new fear lays hold of me. I can no longer remember the direction. Quiet, I squat in a shell hole and try to locate myself. More than once it has happened that some fellow has jumped joyfully into a trench only then to discover that it was the wrong one.

After a little time I listen again, but still I am not sure. The confusion of shell holes now seems so bewildering that I can no longer tell in my agitation which way I should go. Perhaps I am crawling parallel to the lines, and that might go on for ever. So I crawl round once again in a wide curve.

These damned rockets! They seem to burn for an hour, and a man cannot make the least movement without bringing bullets whistling round.

But there is nothing for it, I must get out. Falteringly I work my way farther, I move off over the ground like a crab and rip my hands sorely on the jagged splinters, as sharp as razor blades. Often I think that the sky is becoming lighter on the horizon, but it may be merely my imagination. Then gradually I realize that to crawl in the right direction is a matter of life or death.

A shell crashes. Almost immediately two others. And then it begins in earnest. A bombardment. Machine guns rattle. Now there is nothing for it but to stay lying low. Apparently an attack is coming. Everywhere the rockets shoot up. Unceasing.

I lie huddled in a large shell hole, my legs in the water up to the belly. When the attack starts I will let myself fall into the water, with my face as deep in the mud as I can keep it without suffocating. I must pretend to be dead.

Suddenly I hear the barrage lift. At once I slip down into the water, my helmet on the nape of my neck and my mouth just clear so that I can get a breath of air.

I lie motionless—somewhere something clanks, it stamps and stumbles nearer—all my nerves become taut and icy. It clatters over me and away, the first wave has passed. I have but this one shattering thought: What will you do if someone jumps into your shell hole?—Swiftly I pull out my little dagger, grasp it fast and bury it in my hand once again under the mud. If anyone jumps in here I will go for him; it hammers in my forehead; at once, stab him clean through the throat, so that he cannot call out; that's the only way; he will be just as frightened as I am, when in terror we fall upon one another, then I must be first.

Now our batteries are firing. A shell lands near me. That makes me savage with fury, all it needs now is to be killed by our own shells; I curse and grind my teeth in the mud; it is a raving frenzy; in the end all I can do is groan and pray.

The crash of the shells bursts in my ears. If our fellows make a counter raid I will be saved. I press my head against the earth and listen to the muffled thunder, like the explosions of quarrying—and raise it again to listen for the sounds on top.

The machine guns rattle. I know our barbed wire entanglements are strong and almost undamaged—parts of them are charged with a powerful electric current. The rifle-fire increases. They have not broken through; they have to retreat.

I sink down again, huddled, strained to the uttermost. The banging, the creeping, the clanging becomes audible. One single cry yelling amongst it all. They are raked with fire, the attack is repulsed.

* * *

Already it has become somewhat lighter. Steps hasten over me. The first. Gone. Again, another. The rattle of machine guns becomes an unbroken chain. Just as I am about to turn round a little, something heavy stumbles, and with a crash a body falls over me into the shell hole, slips down and lies across me—

I do not think at all, I make no decision—I strike madly home and feel only how the body suddenly convulses, then becomes limp, and collapses. When I recover myself, my hand is sticky and wet.

The man gurgles. It sounds to me as though he bellows, every gasping breath is like a cry, a thunder—but it is only my heart pounding. I want to stop his mouth, stuff it with earth, stab him again, he must be quiet, he is betraying me; now at last I regain control of myself, but have suddenly become so feeble that I cannot any more lift my hand against him.

So I crawl away to the farthest corner and stay there, my eyes glued on him, my hand grasping the knife—ready, if he stirs, to spring at him again. But he won't do so any more, I can hear that already in his gurgling.

I can see him indistinctly. I have but one desire, to get away. If it is not soon it will be too light; it will be difficult enough now. Then as I try to raise up my head I see it is impossible already. The machine gun fire so sweeps the ground that I would be shot through and through before I could make one jump.

I test it once with my helmet, which I take off and hold up to find out the level of the shots. The next moment it is knocked out of my hand by a bullet. The fire is sweeping very low over the ground. I am not far enough from the enemy line to escape being picked off by one of the snipers if I attempt to get away.

The light increases. Burning, I wait for our attack. My hands are white at the knuckles, I clench them so tightly in my longing for the fire to cease so that my comrades may come.

Minute after minute trickles away. I dare not look again at the dark figure in the shell hole. With an effort I look past it and wait, wait. The bullets hiss, they make a steel net, never ceasing, never ceasing.

Then I notice my bloody hand and suddenly feel nauseated. I take some earth and rub the skin with it, now my hand is muddy and the blood cannot be seen any more.

The fire does not diminish. It is equally heavy from both sides. Our fellows have probably given me up for lost long ago.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Becoming cynical at her mother's wish to have her marry for wealth and social position, Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, accepts the ardent attentions of Jack Beamer, supposedly an Englishman of noble birth, who is married to a wealthy invalid. On a mountain trip Nancy, after a brief courtship, makes a hasty marriage with a handsome ranger, Roger Decatur. Sickening of the loneliness, with Roger away, she returns home to resume her old life, still keeping her marriage a secret. When Roger, deeply in love with Nancy, comes to take her back, she tells him unless he makes his home in the city she will divorce him, although she realizes her own love for him. After Roger leaves, Nancy continues her clandestine affair with Beamer, whose wife, aware of his philandering, refuses to free him. Louise, Nancy's sister, always second with men, now has a rich, though elderly, suitor. Beamer takes Nancy out to his stock farm on a jaunt. Mrs. Beamer unexpectedly arrives and Nancy is bundled into the kitchen. Beamer decides to placate his wife to protect his own financial welfare. Nancy, though humiliated, forgives all when he phones. At home Nancy assails her mother for catering to Lachman, Louise's rich admirer. When Louise, who is in love with Mat Tully, forgets her family dinner for Lachman, disaster impends. When her family is all together, Louise suddenly announces she is going to get married.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPER XLIII.

"MARRIED?" Nancy was the first to grasp it. "Married . . . Oh Lou . . . so soon?"

"Thursday."

"Thursday . . . why, Lou . . . that's wonderful!" Nancy came alive. The old light came back to her eyes, the color to her cheek. At last something was happening, something nice.

Louise waited quietly.

"To . . . to whom, may I ask?" Mamma mouthed the words with elaborate sarcasm. Her little hands stirred in her lap. Her head began to shake. She looked appealingly at papa, but he saw only Louise.

"Louise," he faltered, "you, you aren't making a mistake? Because of my . . . my . . ." He couldn't go on. He pointed at his useless legs, wrapped in the wheel chair.

"Peter!" mamma shrilled, "I won't have you taking that attitude! Do you hear me? I won't have it!" Her faded eyes had brightened, she breathed deeply, her nostrils dilated. She had caught her husband's thought . . . Oliver Lachman . . . Louise was going to marry him after all . . . But even as she rejoiced, she wept. For Louise had not told her, she had kept it a secret from her own mother.

Louise stood up, one hand protectingly on her father's shoulder. She looked very tall and young and strong, standing beside the little wizened old man.

"There's no use making a fuss," she said simply. "Mat and I are going to be married Thursday, that's all."

And through it mamma went right on, "Mat Tully! That that whippersnapper. That cheap ten cent scientist! Oh, what a fool you are. Oh, to think you'd do this, after all we've done for you, all I've sacrificed! Well, I won't permit it, that's all. I won't have it! Do you hear me?"

"Don't LISTEN to her, Lou. Don't you let mamma spoil your life! Don't you do it—"

And papa, forgetting himself and his infirmity in beholding Kitty's frenzy, tried to make peace amongst his women folk, as he had in the old days when the girls were younger, and Kitty thought their beaux unworthy. "Why Thursday?" he asked anxiously, try to 'shh' Kitty at the same time. "Couldn't you put it off a week, or two, dear? You don't want to worry your mother, do you?"

Louise smiled tearfully. She said, in a voice that shook a little in spite of all her effort to keep it steady, "I don't want to worry anybody, but I can't help it. It must be Thursday. We're leaving Thursday for Kansas City. Mat must go home because his father is so ill, and there's some business. They've sent for him. He wants me to go, too."

"Kansas City!" Mamma spat it out. "Nancy wastes her time on Gales Flat, and now it's you and Kansas City. Oh why, why do you both take up with such COMMON people!" The tears rolled unchecked over her withered cheeks, down her best silk blouse. She wrung her hands and moaned, but nobody listened, they had all crowded around Louise asking questions, exclaiming, even Peter had forgot her. "Get that time table out of my overcoat pocket will you Nancy?" He adjusted his glasses. "I want to see what time you go through Ogden. I had quite a stopover there, when I went East in 1914!"

Three days! So much can happen in three days. Mat seemed like one of the family already. He sat by Papa's wheel chair and listened while Papa told him how many home runs Babe Ruth made last year, and who'd be the next heavyweight champion, and why.

Louise had told no one of her plans, but everyone seemed to know about them. The telephone rang incessantly. May Belle, Mrs. Craig, Helen Heffinger. The sorority girls.

"My dear, isn't it WONDERFUL! But how SUDDEN!"

"You sly thing . . . who'd ever think that you and Mat Tully—"

Louise answered in a sort of daze. She sat beside her unpacked trunk, and let Nancy pack it. She wandered around the house opening closet doors, poking into old boxes marked "Silk Pcs" and "L's dolls."

"My lord, you're hopeless," Nancy giggled, giving her a good natured push. She herself was flaming with excitement. Living over her own adventure. Tying ribbons with tender fingers. Laughing at the impossibility of ever finishing all there was to do. Wiping her eyes in dark corners . . . why couldn't she have had Lou's courage?

Lou had faced the family. Stuck to her guns. Never faltered.

"I wish I had your nerve!" she told her at last. "Lord, I never thought you'd have had the courage to break the news, and go on with it as you have. I used to think I was the one with nerve . . . But I never knew what it meant—"

"It doesn't take courage to marry the man you love."

"No—no. But to stick it out—"

"But I love Mat. I couldn't do anything else."

Nancy fixed large, disillusioned eyes on her sister. "That's the joke, I guess," she said bitterly. "I never really knew you . . . you . . . you're magnificent! I'm the —the weak sister. Say, I'd have married old Lachman—"

"Nancy!"

"Oh yes I would, just to be agreeable. And then murdered him, feeling sorry for myself a couple of days later . . . honest!"

"Oh you crazy baby!" Louise's warm arms were around her little sister, holding her close. They both laughed, finding relief in levity, fearing they had betrayed too much, Lou of the love that was too sacred to share, even with Nancy, Nancy of secret, dark excitement that was consuming her, making the nights wakeful, the days leaden, slow with waiting.

"Well, I didn't worry about papa. I knew he'd rather like it," Lou said, eager to change the subject. "But I was rather upset about mamma. I was afraid for a minute that she'd have a stroke, too."

"Oh nonsense," Nancy murmured easily. "She's beginning to enjoy it already!"

And Nancy was right. Mamma had pulled herself together and attempted to manage the hasty wedding. "If you insist on going on with this crazy notion, you'll have to wake up and get some clothes!" she told the prospective bride severely. "We can't have you going to these strange people looking like a pauper. . .not that they're the kind to know quality . . . still. . . ."

Aunt Ellie, still chained to her chair by the broken hip that would never mend, listened to mamma's hastily gabbled account, and Louise's sketchy explanation, and insisted upon seeing the young man for herself.

"There are a few things I'm going to tell him for his own good," she told the panic-stricken Lou. "Young men don't know how to take care of a wife!"

"Aunt Ellie—please! Aunt Ellie, if I beg you not to say anything to Mat—"

She wouldn't promise, but when the reluctant boy was presented Lou began to breathe easier. Family history, the "crick" in her leg, and the difficulty of finding a good butcher nowadays more than filled their hour.

They were all ready to go when she suddenly remembered she had not really begun. She lifted one fat finger.

"Wait a minute!" she said sternly. "Wait a minute, young man. I'm practically the head of this family, what with the poor girl's father having a stroke, and her mother running bills I'll have to pay, not that I'd mind buying a trouseau if I could see my way clear to stop there. But—"

"Aunt Ellie—oh, please Mat—you mustn't mind! Aunt Ellie, don't you see that Mat and I—"

"Poppycock!" snorted Aunt Ellie, having the best time she's had for years. "Poppycock nonsense! You're a lovesick fool, and I'm surprised at you. I thought you had more sense, Louise Peebles Hollenbeck! Face the facts! The Parkhurst Bank isn't going to pay your father much longer for sitting in a wheelchair. Who's going to take care of your mother and sister, hey? Who's going to take care of you? Young man, what are you getting married on? What are you going to eat? Love and kisses!"

Neapolitan Music Among Radio Features Tonight

By DARRELL V. MARTIN,
Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

The Columbia outfit has thrown itself right into the atmosphere by adding sustaining programs of this nature every week or so. Tonight at 8 it will be "Sorrento Serenade" through WJAS. We hope to hear an old favorite, "Santa Lucia," which never fails to enthrall us.

Then this Chicago Celebrities' thing, KDKA, at 8, gets under way with the Great Lakes String Quartet and the Los Angeles Trio with guitar. It's a good bet.

Two outstanding programs will come to us at 9 o'clock. WCAE will offer "Landmarks in Music" as the highlights of the General Electric Hour. Suite No. 1 from Bizet's "Carmen" and Saint-Saens' "Danse Macabre" put the Detroit Symphony concert on a high plane.

The Romancers—and the program looks different—will make its debut to Pittsburgh fans over WJAS at 8:30 p. m.

We'll bet a cookie the Pickard Family omits "Steamboat Bill" just because we want to hear it, but we won't feel vexed if they only remember to include "Well, I Swan!" KDKA at 8:30 o'clock.

The Temple Hour, WJAS at 9:30, will be full of marimba and glass jar novelties.

We Now Present

First time we saw the Whippet at Kennywood—ooh! how terrible—we wondered how much the first rider received for risking his neck to prove its safety. We have learned since that the first rider is usually the designer and that if he lives through the first journey he collects for his work. This information from Paul G. Grine, of Beaver, special announcer at WCAE, who designs roller coasters, slides and other devices for a living.

Paul has his "ups and downs." If you have been to Crystal Beach, Canada; the Palisades Park, N. J., or visited the Sesquicentennial at Philadelphia, you will appreciate the fun Mr. Grine must have had in riding for the first time the roller coasters they have there. "Jack and Jill" at Coney Island is his handiwork. The owners are so pleased with his job that they have asked Mr. Grine to design them the world's largest roller coaster. It will be full of dips. If Mr. Grine asks you to "go for a ride," don't hesitate—his buggies never leave the track.

Reports of the Hearst-Zeppelin Round-the-World Flight will be given daily over KDKA.

Wonder what that local announcer was thinking about last night when he introduced Mary Jeffrey, pianist, as "Mary Kurtzmann."

You may take from this what you want: Cousin Lora and Richard Bower, of WCAE—who are very close friends—have picked September 2 as the ideal date for vacationing. If you find out first, tell us.

John A. Parsons, an electrical merchant, of Philadelphia, who is visiting Benjamin Moore, genial toastmaster, of Bellevue, tells a good one about broadcasting in the early days. It seems that WJZ just had to have an organ for a certain program and it was out of the question to start building one that day for use that night. At Bound Brook, N. J., the manager learned that Mr. Parsons had a portable organ in his home. Forthwith went an emissary to Philadelphia about 3 o'clock. At 6 that night a truck was plowing through snow on its way to Bound Brook with an instrument weighing better than a ton. Listeners knew nothing of the task that had been undertaken to place organ music at their dials, and it was the first instance, perhaps, of the "prop" man in radio.

Judging of answers in the Freed "Sound-Eye Test" conducted by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph recently will be completed some time next week. A new Freed Radio will be given the winner.

Have you heard the rebroadcast of KGO programs over WGY? They have been quite successful.

Real Estate

A strip of land between the right-of-way of the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Allegheny River at Aspinwall, has been purchased by the John F. Casey Company for the dual purpose of straightening property lines and providing a recreation field for the Casey employes. The plot contains about five and one-half acres and was bought from the Pennsylvania Railroad in consideration of $17,800. It adjoins the plant of the Casey company and faces the river. It will be landscaped and planted in trees and shrubs in making it an attractive park for the workers and their families. In straightening the property lines the John F. Casey Company sold a small plot formerly owned by the Hillside Stone Company to the railroad company.

Sales of three English type dwellings in Marshall Manor, North Side, have been reported since August 1 by the General Homes Corporation. The purchasers are Albert G. Weinmann, Elizabeth Brennen and John Hiebner. Each house is on a lot 35x100 feet. The considerations vary from $10,000 to $13,500.

FAIL TO LOCATE SHRINE GOLD

A police court hearing today failed to throw light on the disappearance of the contents of a cornerstone box, said to have contained $500 in gold and valuable papers, in the wrecking of the old Labor Temple, Webster avenue and Washington street.

The box was placed in the cornerstone of the building when it was erected by the Shriners of Syria Temple more than a quarter of a century ago. When the building was sold to the Union Labor Organization, the Shriners reserved right to the box when the building was torn down.

David Harris, Negro laborer, had been notified to watch for the box, R. J. Omslaer, of 1612 Meadville street, the contractor engaged in wrecking the structure, testified. The Negro and Omslaer were arrested yesterday after the box, with one end sheared off, was found empty.

Omslaer was arrested as a witness against Harris. A man, posing as a member of the Shrine, had previously offered $100 for the box, it was testified.

Harris denied knowing anything about the contents of the box. He was held over. Omslear was discharged.

GAS EXPLOSION BURNS MAN

An explosion of gas in an excavation at Trenton and Rebecca avenues, Wilkinsburg, early today burned John Newman, 54, of 7322 Princeton place, Swissvale, on the face and hands. He was taken to Columbia Hospital by Patrolman Dale Rankin, of the Wilkinsburg police.

Newman, night watchman for the McCurdy Brothers, construction contractors, was making his rounds at the corner where his company is constructing a new street. When he stooped to light a lantern which had gone out, the match ignited the gas, causing an explosion which engulfed him in a sheet of flame.

MAN RUN DOWN, DRIVER SOUGHT

Police today were looking for an automobile with a broken headlight in hope of locating the driver who struck August Jakajty, 63, of 174 Pius street, at South Twenty-seventh and Carson streets, and left him lying in the street.

At South Side Hospital it was said his condition was serious.

Jakajty was employed on a night shift of the Jones and Laughlin steel plant, and was on his way home when hit by the automobile. The accident was witnessed by several persons from a distance, but they were unable to get the license number.

Community Effort Topic of Malone

Voluntary co-operative effort of people in a community indicates stability of the community and its people, President of Council James F. Malone said in an address before a crowd of 100 in the Allentown Turner hall last night. He was speaking in the interest of his candidacy for mayor, and urged upon his audience the importance of voting. Andrew Cherry, a resident of the Eighteenth Ward, acted as chairman of the meeting.

In Memoriam 1-B

In memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Emma Fink, who died August 10, 1927.

A wonderful mother, woman and aid
One who was better, God never made,
A wonderful worker, so loyal and true,
One in a million that, mother was you.
Just in your judgment always right,
Honest and liberal, ever upright and true.
Loved by your friends and all whom you knew
Our wonderful mother, that mother was you.
Sadly missed by family.

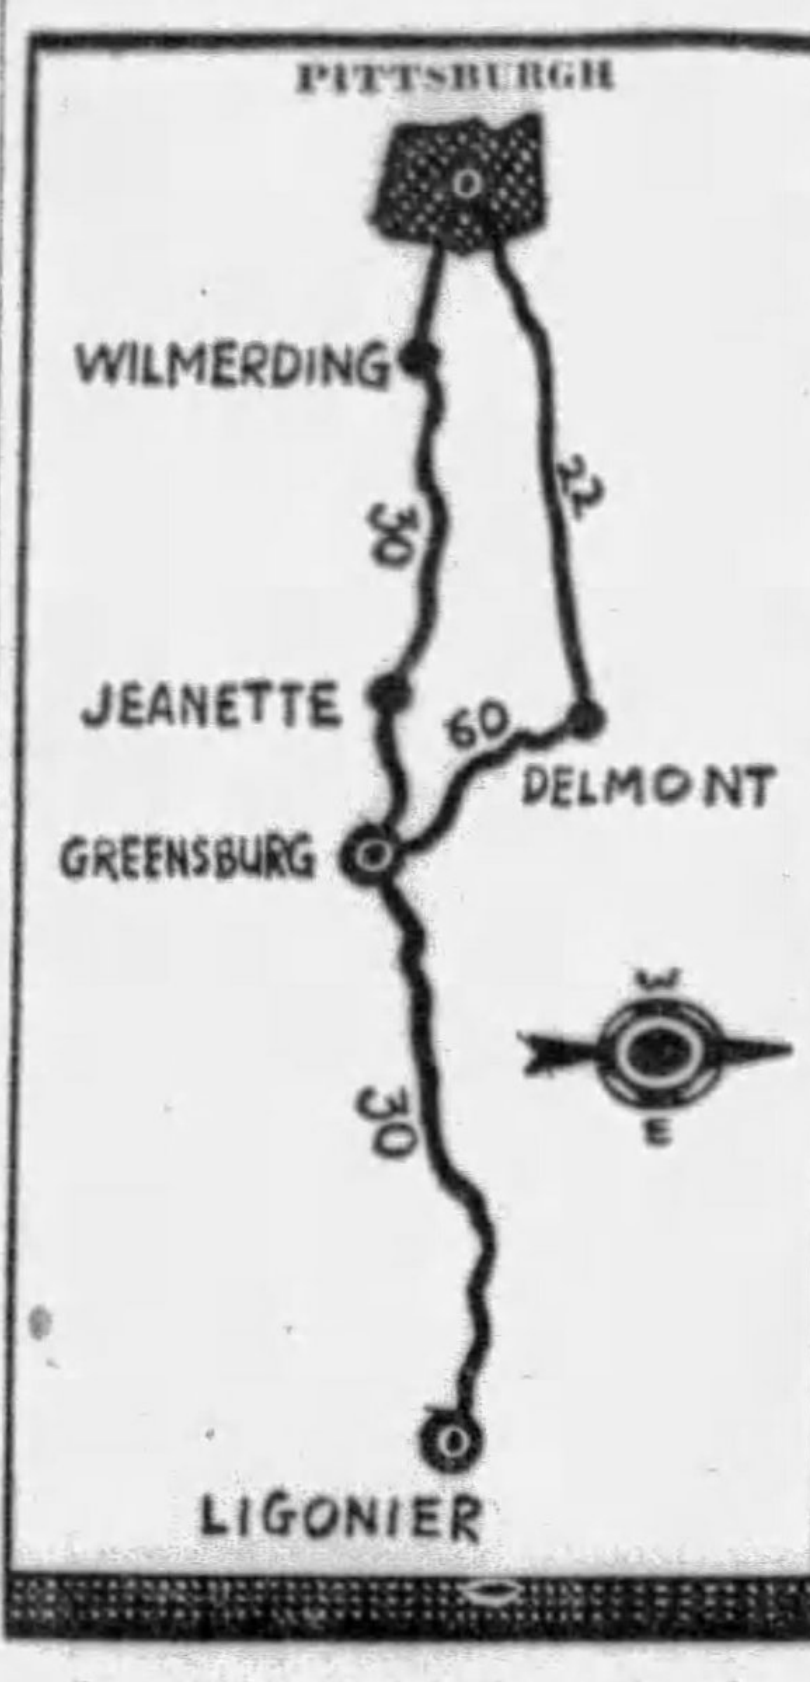
A SUGGESTION



An ideal jaunt through the foothills of the Alleghenies leads from Pittsburgh on route No. 30 through Wilmerding, Jeannette and Greensburg to Ligonier, as shown on the chart above. Good restaurants make Ligonier a fine place to eat lunch, or a picnic basket can be enjoyed in the woods of the district. On the return trip, turn off route No. 30 at Greensburg, swinging over to Delmont on route No. 60, and back to Pittsburgh on the William Penn Highway, route No. 22.

Where public service companies or individuals open such trenches, either at their own request or by order of the City, the City shall require said companies or individuals to backfill the trench or trenches in a workmanlike manner and place any concrete that may be required by the County to reinforce the sub-grade and insure the stability of the boulevard pavement. The City may require said companies or individuals to pay for said backfill and concrete work. The City agrees to relieve the County of the responsibility for the failure of any part of the pavement of this improvement or any structures connected therewith, occasioned by the subsidence of any trenches opened by the City, public service companies or individuals, whether said trenches are opened before or after the improvement of this boulevard by a contract or contracts let by Allegheny County.

TWELFTH. The City agrees to pay to the County the additional cost of backfilling any trenches with slag and the cost of removing and replacing concrete slabs or pavement over said trenches, when trenches opened by either the City or others are found in such condition as to endanger the strength or stability of the work to be done by the County. In case such trenches are found, their condition shall be brought to the attention of the Director of Public Works of the City by letter, and if the condition is not corrected by the City within three (3) days after the delivery of such letter, the County shall correct the condition and bill the City for the actual construction cost of same.

BUGS BAER Says

JUST SMALL CHANGE

"Bugs" Baer

We do know that it is the medium of exchange in semi-solvent civilizations.

Then we started wondering why Andy Mellon abbreviating the spending area of dollar bills.

Now, Andy doesn't do anything without a reason even when he is wrong.

There must be a reason for making money shorter, possibly to make our finger nails grow longer.

There is something sentimental about the dollar bill, aside from its intrinsic value. Of course, its intrinsic value ain't hay.

If it is hay, we have never seen it in stacks.

He always framed it and put it over the cash register. It may have been yours.

Then you spent the rest of your life looking at it from the wrong side of the bar and wishing that you had it back.

As a patriot, we object to the condensation of paper in dollar bills.

Still, even if they are reducing the size of the posters, it is still a pretty good circus.

Why not do away with money altogether? Just step up to the salesman and say "Send that Rolls-Bazzazzi motor car up to my duplex chateau. I will pay you on sight. In the meantime, you had better consult an oculist."

Wouldn't that be neat? You could buy everything you wanted and pay for it in non-collectible installments.

They haven't changed the epitaphs on new bills. It still states that this certificate is good for all public debts.

"Hey, you hyenas, when are you going to pay me for those Thanksgiving turkeys?"

EXTRA!

(Lamar, Missouri, Democrat)

We had the most excitement on the northeast corner of the square, that there's been since the hanging, ten years ago. The crowd that gathered was big and excitement ran high. It was nothing less than a hotly contested dog fight.

The two canines, that came so near making it necessary to call out the national guard, were Stuart Jones's police dog and Will H. Jones's bulldog. The dogs came to grips near the front door of the Cribbett store. In about a minute a hundred men were present. Some of the crowd were for one dog, some were for the other. It wasn't long until the partisans of the police dog began to complain that the bull had an unfair advantage in the collar he wore. The police dog's throat and neck were bare. The bull's neck and throat were protected by a leather collar, so that the teeth of his antagonist spent themselves more or less harmlessly instead of tearing into the bull.

Take his collar off and let 'em fight fair! came from several parts of the ever swelling crowd. 'Taint no fair for that there bull dog to have that leather collar. Take it off!

Buck Rice started to cut the leather from the bull's neck and leave him to take punishment fair and square. Harry Whitchurch grabbed Buck, reminded him that they were not his dogs. This made Buck so darned mad that he was just about ready to cut Harry's collar off.

Will Jones, who owned the bull was present shortly after the fight began, having stopped his car nearby and gotten out. Stuart Jones, owner of the police dog hadnt' yet come up. Will was naturally against having his dog's collar cut off. When Stuart came up, he saw the handicap the bull dog's collar put on his dog, and he suggested to Will, that they take off bull's collar. Will didn't take kindly to this suggestion so they were soon exchanging heated remarks.

Will restrained himself at first, making some remark to the effect that he had reached a time, beyond fighting himself.

The more Will thought about the disposition to butt in and take his dog's collar off, the madder he got. He began to feel like he could lick Stuart and his dog to boot. He stepped over to his car, got an ice pick and stuck it in his pocket. But Evart Earp deftly frisked the pick from Will's clothes. Will pulled off his coat and grabbed Stuart. The latter then clinched Will, getting a mean half nelson around his neck.

The crowd by this time was more enthusiastic over Will and Stuart than it had been about the dogs. As for the two dogs, having started so much trouble, they were standing by with their tongues lolled out, trying to get back their breath.

Let 'em fight, Let 'em fight came from the crowd. They didn't mean the dogs, they meant Stuart and Bill.

Constable Lisby Garret here stepped in and perked Will and Stuart apart. Will was mad, and suggested that he and Stuart go out of town, with nobody present and settle it. Stuart was willing, but the constable wasn't.

About the time the owners of the dogs came together, Marshal Shepherd, who was present at the dog fight, got into a hot argument with A. Hamilton, who jumped on him because he didn't do something. Price told Mr. Hamilton if anything had happened that he didn't approve of to go swear out a warrant. This interpolation by his tormentor deprived Price seeing the trouble start between Bill and Stuart.

The incident gave the boys in the stores and about the soda fountains, something exciting and important to talk about, as it happened about 8:30 Friday morning, and left the whole day in which to make medicine.

Light Jubilee Observance Especially Fitting Here

The golden jubilee of electric light, marking the fiftieth anniversary of the new universal method of illumination, is to be celebrated in Pittsburgh the week of October 21, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce with A. L. Humphrey, president of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company, as general chairman. It is proposed to have the celebration include a resume of Pittsburgh's progress industrially and commercially during the 50 years that have elapsed since the electric lamp was invented.

In the celebration it is planned to honor the achievements of builders of Pittsburgh, including Andrew Carnegie, Henry C. Frick, H. J. Heinz and George Westinghouse.

It seems appropriate that an especially elaborate program should mark the local participation in the national Golden Jubilee of Electric Light, since Pittsburgh had such a large share in the development of it, George Westinghouse having been a pioneer in the introduction of alternating current electrical machinery.

The electric lamp dispelled much darkness besides that due to the absence of sunlight. Its rays lighted the way to many uses to which electric current now has been put. It called the dynamo into service and the dynamo showed us that it had many other uses besides that of furnishing current for the illumination of our streets and houses.

The electric lamp was a marvelous invention, a stepping stone to vast industry, in which Pittsburgh has a prominent place. It is especially fitting that we here should celebrate its birth.

Sick War Veterans Not Getting Sufficient Care

When the American Legion meets in annual convention at Louisville, Ky., next month its members will face a bounden duty to their sick and disabled comrades in the great war which it would be cowardly to dodge.

For only the Legion can convince the American people how seriously to blame are their Senators and Representatives in Congress for the fact that the federal government is making no adequate provision to provide hospital care for thousands of veterans now in need of it and for the additional thousands that will soon be in need of such care.

This is not a guess. Here are the figures of the United States Veterans' Bureau. These show that on the first of last July there were more than 1,000 veterans unable to be hospitalized because of lack of beds and nearly 1,000 more in state and civil institutions which should be in federal hospitals.

Especially distressing is the condition of those veterans who are mentally ill. A survey of state and civil institutions for the insane which was made within three months is appalling. It shows that there are approximately 7,000 service men suffering from mental diseases confined in those institutions who must ultimately be taken care of in hospitals operated by the federal government.

And in some of these non-federal institutions the overcrowding is as frightful as among the inmates of our federal prisons. As an example the Legion quotes the New Jersey Commissioner of Institutions and Agencies as saying that there are 40 per cent more patients in the Greystone Park State Hospital than can be properly cared for.

"Beds are crowded together in some dormitories," says this New Jersey official, "necessitating patients crawling over one another to get into their beds. Hallways and corridors, the only space available for patients in the daytime, are turned into dormitories.

"In rooms which normally should not house more than one, two or three patients, there are as many as three, six and seven. Beds are jammed into rooms so that the doors are blocked and entrance and exit are difficult."

Yet the Congress of the wealthiest nation on the face of the earth, at its last session, deliberately refused to pass the bill recommended by the Director of the Veterans' Bureau providing for 3,576 additional beds at a cost of $11,480,000. Meantime the number of cases is increasing all the time.

At the hearings on this bill it was brought out that it requires more than three years to construct a hospital after legislative authority has been granted.

Nobody who knows the American people, nobody who has any faith in them would believe that they begrudge their every sick and disabled defender with the colors in the great war the best hospital treatment that a grateful nation can provide.

But the American people have been outrageously misrepresented by those who were elected to represent them in both Houses of Congress. Because Congress, with all the facts before it, failed to authorize the building of the additional hospitals which the facts and the figures show are absolutely essential.

What the American Legion tells them about the condition of their sick and disabled comrades the American people will believe. What the Legion tells them about the neglect of which Congress is guilty the people will also believe.

To the Louisville convention of the Legion therefore, the country has a right to look for "the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" about the shortcomings of Congress in its attitude toward the sick and disabled men of the great war.

No Congress will dare to defy wrath of the American people when they possess themselves of the truth that the American Legion is so well qualified to give them about this vital business.

Bible Passages

Both Lord and Christ

(The Acts 2; 29-36)

MEN and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day.

Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne:

This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we are all witnesses.

Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.

For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand,

Until I make thy foes thy footstool.

Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

"SO your son George is home from college for the summer vacation, is he?" says Mrs. Gaab to Mrs. Werk.

"Yes, and he's the smart boy since he's been to college," says Mrs. Werk. "He's smarter in his mind than anybody I ever saw. It's worth the money, although I do have to work hard every day for it."

"Do you get a lot of things to talk about, the two of you?"

"Well, I got a lot of thinks to talk to him about, but so far I ain't had a chance. You see I go to work early. So far I ain't seen him except at noon when I come home for lunch. He's always sleeping quietly then, and I go in and look at him. He's awful smart to look at since he's been to college. Of course he's off to a party by the time I get home from work at night so we don't get much time together."

THE HEARST PAPERS DEMAND FOR AMERICA

1—SCHOOLS—MORE schools—BETTER schools—MORE ADEQUATE and more MODERN school buildings; the best TEACHERS and the best COMPENSATION for teachers; a SCHOOL SEAT and a LIBERAL EDUCATION for every child in America, native or foreign born.

AMERICA is the great melting pot of the world, and the product of the melting pot must be competent, educated, loyal, moral AMERICAN CITIZENS.

That is America's duty to itself and its contribution to the social organization.

THE schools are for all children; and all the children should there be taught and trained and graduated in that KNOWLEDGE WHICH IS POWER and in an enlightened understanding of AMERICAN PRINCIPLES AND IDEALS.

THE government of a Democracy reposes in the hands of the people, and the success of that government, the progress, the prosperity, the perpetuation of the nation depend upon the EDUCATION of the people, and the ABILITY OF THE PEOPLE TO GOVERN.

SCHOOLS are the foundation stones of the republic. Make them STRONG and SOUND and SUFFICIENT.

HE DIDN'T TOOT HIS HORN

By Herbert Kaufman

IN 1870, when Emil Berliner stepped down the gang-plank of the little Bremen steamer that brought him from Hanover, Opportunity paid no apparent attention to the pompadoured, near-sighted youngster and allowed him to slip her immediate grasp.

A few years after, making the rounds of Washington, she found him keeping books in Behrend's jobbing house on Seventh Street and advised him to take a squint at TELEGRAPHY.

Like his friend, Edison, he discovered his inventive genius there. He borrowed a Morse set and started to tinker with the instrument.

And out of his bedroom experiments popped the LOOSE COHERER, from which the long distance telephone, and, subsequently, wireless and the microphone, developed.

They offered him a block of stock, but young Esau held out for a life tenure salary, and consequently drew a stipend of fifteen thousand dollars per year up to his death, instead of dividends on an interest in the MOTHER COMPANY eventually worth the better part of a billion.

Anyhow, he saw his name, for several decades, hyphenated with Bell's on every mouth-piece. So he had his FULL share of CREDIT, even if inexperience DID short-change him out of a whaling bunch of CASH.

He got what he wanted (which was the main thing)—the assured wherewithal to philander with possibility at heart's content. And, before long, Opportunity popped in with the suggestion that Thomas Alva's new phonograph wasn't QUITE up to snuff.

WORDS and music recorded on wax cylinders blurred too quickly. Wax was an impermanent material. Why not trap the vibrations of a tympanum and let them groove a revolving disk of hard rubber or some such stuff?

ERGO, the Berliner gramophone—more familiar to nowadays as the Victor Talking Machine. Kindly remember how we owe THAT to Emil Berliner TOO.

Between whiles, he taught the country to protect its milk supply, composed a book or two, and studied music. But NEVER learned to toot his OWN horn.

HE enjoyed the rare distinction of creating one of the most important groups of utilities in common use, and of being perhaps the LEAST known of America's extraordinary citizens.

Journalism signally neglected his eminence, and NONE of the great universities conferred honorary degrees upon a genius to whom physics and mechanics are everlasting DEBTORS.

On the other hand, he owed NOTHING to higher education.

He began with the commonplace training of a high school boy and achieved miracles, in a home-made laboratory, that contemporary professors in acoustics, dynamics and electricity hadn't even SUSPECTED.

He made the grade ALONE—and so can YOU.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION

By Archibald Henderson

THE twentieth century will be distinguished, in the history of civilization, for our great scientific disclosure of time as a fourth dimension and the creativity of this conception in forming the new cosmology. When Minkowski and Einstein revolutionized our conception of the cosmos, they brought most fruitfully to bear the purely theoretical conception of a four-dimensional space-time world.

All great religious revolutions have likewise been intimately associated with a change in man's conception of the cosmos. When Copernicus advanced the theory that the earth, instead of being flat, was only one of a number of minor planets, rotating upon its axis and wheeling annually about the sun, he had no thought of making an assault upon religion. In the light of minute investigation, he was revolutionizing man's conception of the cosmos and substituting the sun in place of the earth as the presumed center of the solar system.

Animated by a similar passion for the discovery of the truth, Galileo devoted a lifetime of effort and research to the patient interrogation of Nature. It was his epochal discovery that force is proportional, not to motion imparted, but to rate of change of motion. The distinguished American physicist, Millikan, recently declared that "no idea that has ever come into human thought has exercised so profound an influence upon the development and destinies of the race as has this idea." The reason he assigns for making this sweeping statement is that the scientific method employed by Galileo began at about this time to "change in a large way the whole mode of thought of the human race, to change the philosophic and religious conceptions of mankind, because the foundations were here laid for a new advance in man's conception of God, for a sublimer view of the world and of man's place and destiny in it."

This great discovery was a definite step in the direction of demonstrating that the universe is not driven by a blind, capricious will, but is governed by laws marked by beauty and harmony.

An orderly universe knowable through the principle that like causes produce like effects, which replaced the fallacious idea of a senseless raging of blind mechanical forces, was the germ of a conception which was basically religious. It directed the consciousness of mankind to the idea of a benevolent creator, the Supreme Scientist, working through law and endowing man with powers of mind, intuition and imagination which would enable him to discover the hidden laws and mysterious properties of matter, force and energy. Such a discovery imparted to man an enrapturing sense of almost God-like power, opening his eyes to the possibility of mastering the secrets of Nature and manipulating them for the benefit and enrichment of human life.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Yesterday

TOO many think of yesterday with pain
And see it ringed with aura of regret,
They sigh for joys that cannot come again,
They sigh for follies they would fain forget.
Too few have learned that yesterday still lives
In fruits and flowers which they call today's;
It is the rain of yesterday which gives
This rose its red, this green to grassy ways.
Each yesterday continues vital still,
Where all its thoughts and acts remain, and will
Throughout the endless centuries to be.
They who look back can see along the way
Each yesterday a portion of today.

DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

OAKLAND, Aug. 10—Oakland is San Francisco's sister city across the bay. And just as Newark is often dwarfed by the nearness of New York so is Oakland by San Francisco. Yet in many ways the city is one of the most remarkable in the entire nation.

It has thrift, stability and a so-called middle class charm that is unequaled. Forty-two per cent of inhabitants own their own homes. The average earning of an industrial worker is $50 higher than the general United States average. Savings bank deposits are extraordinarily high.

The death rate for Oakland is six per cent less than the general average. There are no slums and only a handful of tenement dwellings. A working man who does not drive to work is his car is an oddity—almost a misfit. Coupled with all this, almost every worker is of American extraction.

Oakland is in a sort of bowl with industries at its base and the residential section flung picturesquely up on the hills. The higher up one goes the more exclusive. Every workingman's home is a well built bungalow with a garden on a tree lined street.

The city basked in a sort of municipal lethargy until about 10 years ago when it began suddenly to expand. In that time it has more than doubled its growth without reaching the proportions of a boom with subsequent deflation. It has 1,275 large industrial plants, says he, talking like a tourist folder.

I may be wrong but if I were an industrial worker I would keep an eye on Oakland. I have never visited a city where I was so impressed with the appearance of content among workers. They have, among so many other advantages, a panorama of natural beauty at their doorstep.

Lake Tahoe, Yosemite, the Big Tree Groves and the Monterey peninsula are within easy drive. Nearer are the home of Joaquin Miller, the Skyline boulevard, which Baedaker calls the third most beautiful drive in the world, the Carquinez Bridge, largest highway construction, and hosts of other eye filling charms.

* * *

One of my extremely thoughtful cicerones to Oakland pleaded futilely for me to try my hand at outdoor bowling on one of the two surviving public bowling greens in America. I was inveigled into in-door bowling not so long ago and that was enough from now on. I spent the next ten days doubled up like the pathetic figure in the kidney ad.

* * *

In New York where one hails a taxi to cross the street, hiking parties are something out of the ordinary. Every week-end groups of them with back packs start out to explore the many lost trails and thin footpaths winding through the hills back of the city.

* * *

Frankness compels an admission San Francisco and Oakland lack the civic cheering so characteristic of Los Angeles. There seems to be no boosting whatever. Still it cannot be said shouting has stunted the Los Angeles growth. It is an old theory bawling children grow fastest. Los Angeles bears it out.

* * *

One is transported to Oakland chiefly by ferry. A ferry ride is about the only romantically old mode of travel that survives. Across San Francisco Bay it is extremely alluring. I crossed four times just for the ride.

* * *

Along a roadside about 50 miles from Oakland is a sign heralding an O. O. McIntyre as a tree surgeon. We have always had a feeling there must be a professor somewhere in our illiterate family.

* * *

On the west coast this trip—not in Oakland, and I won't say where and be shot for treason—I took an earthquake on the chin standing up. All the wall pictures and the doodads on the dressing table began to Charleston. A hotel servant coming in later remarked: "Did you feel the tremble?" Incidentally, if you want to experience the sensation of utter futility play around with "a tremble." But to be fair they are mild and far between and do not do half the damage of our Eastern electrical storms.

* * *

I still think the best earthquake story is the one told on a Los Angeles newspaper. When its near neighbor Santa Barbara was hit by a quake, the Los Angeles sheet is said to have rushed to the streets with an eight-column head reading: "Earthquake Hits Santa Barbara 450 Miles From San Francisco."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

FOUR mad young men passed through my office today.

Each one of them complained because his wife had walked out on him—each one of them indignantly wanting to know what had come over women, anyway. Their mas had not been like that. Their mas had stuck by their dads. They had realized that naturally men were head of the house. They hadn't dashed off to get themselves jobs just because there had been a few words.

Each mad young man with the same complaint, and to each one I gave this response:

"Calm yourself son and wipe your chin and take a tip from a friend. You're seeing the picture all wrong.

"Here it is 1929 and you talk as if you were living in 1899. Believing that the stuff that went for papa will also go for son.

"IT WON'T."

"It is true that your mama wasn't like these modern girls. It is also true that she didn't dash off and get a job for herself when she and the old man had a few words. But there was a reason—

"THERE WAS NO JOB TO DASH TO!

"Mamma stuck because she had to stick and her whole domestic technique was based on that fact. Mamma probably loved papa plenty. Outside of Being a Wife, ma had almost no chances of earning her three squares per. Naturally she knew which side her bread was buttered on and acted accordingly. But NOW DAYS MARRIAGE IS JUST ONE OF THE OPPORTUNITIES OPEN TO LADIES.

"You aren't BESTOWNG a favor upon a Modern Girl when you marry her, son. You're ACCEPTING one. And it behooves you to remember that fact.

"God didn't make man naturally the head of the house—

"He just made him, temporarily, the meal ticket—

"And when the missis is as able to be the meal ticket as the mister, there's got to be a mighty big readjustment in domestic etiquette.

"There's no use trying to make your wife feel about you as your mother felt about your dad. There's a job in the way—and she knows it. She sees through your bluff, son. She knows that you're only holding a couple of deuces. So you might as well lay your cards on the table and ask for a new deal.

"Stop expecting any special consideration because you're a male. Being a male is no longer regarded as a remarkable achievement. Husbands have to qualify now as Regular Humans—or take the count. So I advise you, lad—GET BUSY!"

OH, THESE WOMEN

By Leola Allard

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10.—One thing about this tropical climate, the girls can do so much more with their legs. I've seen them.

Painted by God, a deep sun tan.

With sun-burn hose.

Bare at the beach, at the country club, on the street with sport clothes, and IN THE EVENING at the Ambassador and other hotels, with delicate low-cut evening clothes. I haven't seen a half-dozen pairs of hose since I came here, except hanging in the store windows.

None of the Pacific Coast women wear plain shoes. They are cut or slashed artistically, or they are highly colored or they are sandals, and last night I saw a woman across the aisle at a movie, where the floor light shone on her feet, with sandals. The Chinese kind with a thick sole and two wide black straps across the top, and that's all. No hose of course.

I've seen shoes with no heels whatever, and some with stilts that almost threw the girl on her nose, but she bravely made her way, happily conscious that she was different. There seems to be an idea that you belong here only if you can be different from the others. It's a strain, because so many limits have already been reached.

And they point out a great sign for you, electric lighted, with great letters spelling the name of a moving picture. The girls sitting on the letters are painted board cutouts. "But on the opening night," you are informed, "there were live girls posing on the sign where those wooden ones are."

"With the same clothes?" we ask, noting a misty breeze draped about the figures.

"Yes," they tell you, without a shiver, "the very same."

One of the things that sells you on this country, if you are a woman, is the signs everywhere that read "lemons, 5 cents a dozen," and "cantaloupes, 5 cents each," right after you have been paying 75 cents for 12 lemons and 60 cents for melons in the East. Then the hard part is going back, and remembering.

You can never buy your lemons in comfort after that. It's probably a lot of wives with grievances like this that start families moving to the Pacific Coast.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

WHY so dependent upon others for entertainment?

It irks you to spend an evening at home with your family.

You have allowed this spirit of unrest to possess you to the extent that you cannot spend an evening at home without feeling dissatisfied.

What is so lacking in your home life?

Probably a something that you do not furnish, a failure on your part to do your share in home associations.

You have not felt enough interested to make it happy for those at home.

If your home is nothing more to you than a place to eat, sleep and change your clothes your home is mighty near being disrupted.

Strong family ties, if they ever existed, are soon severed if there is no comradeship.

If you wonder that there is so little affection displayed by members of your family, go deeper and you may find that you yourself have killed it.

You will find in making your home happier for others, you will add to your own interest in it.
